THE CAMPAIGN HAS OPENED!

The Republicans Aroused to Their Duty

300 MEMBERS SIGN

Centre County Republican Club Organized Tuesday Night With Much Enthusiasm—Hon. A. O. Furst is President.

STIRRING CAMPAIGN SPEECHES

The Republican headquarters in the Bush Arcade hall were crowded Tuesday night with a large and enthusiastic gathering of voters eager to hear the campaign issues discussed. It was the firstgun fired in the campaign of 1904 and it was a rouser. The meeting was held pursuant to a call issued by County Chairman Foster and for the purpose of organizing a campaign Republican club. So successful was the effort that over 300 names were enrolled at this the first meeting of the club. The Coleville band furnished the music for the occasion and at 8 o'clock the County Chairman called the meeting to order and explained the object of their coming together. The purpose is to organize an enthusiastic campaign club and push things from now on until the Ides of November.

HON. AUSTIN O. FURST,

Samuel B. Miller was then elected temporary chairman of the meeting and he made one of his old time stirring addresses The first thing in order was the election of a permanent president and everyone instinctively turned to that Nestor of the Centre County bar, an old and life-long Republican, Hon. A. O. Furst and no other name was thought of. Col. Chambers placed him in nomination and he was elected by acclamation. Escorted to the chair by a committee he made a brief but eloquent address which thoroughly aroused the enthusiasm of his hearers. He closed by extending an invitation to all present to come and sign the roll of membership. Over 300 responded to his invitation and it would have done the heart of every Republican in Centre county good to have seen them marching forward to enroll themselves under the banner of Republicanism.

Clement Dale, Esq., then arose and moved that a committee on permanent organization be appointed to report at the next meeting which it was decided should be on Friday night next. The motion carried and the chair appointed the following committee: Clement Dale, H. C. Quigley, Wm. T. Royer, John D. Love and Earle C. Tuten.

Friday night of each week the club will meet until the close of the campaign. This closed the business before the house and Judge Furst called on Noah H. Swayne II, Superintendent of the Nittany Furnace to make a few remarks, Mr. Swayne, although only a resident of the town a short time, has made many friends. He came here from Georgia, and he is on the Republican Electoral ticket in Georgia, which shows he is true blue. He gave a most interesting address, full of sound logic and interspersed with witty sayings that kept his hearers in good humor. He made an unusually good impression.

Rev. J. E. Morris was called upon. He is the pastor of the A. M. E. church at this place and he made a rattling good campaign address and surprised his hearers by his ability as a stump speaker. He has promised County Chairman Foster to make a more extended address at some future time during the campaign.

Eloquent five minute addresses were also made by Edmund Blanchard, Dr. M. J. Locke, J. S. McCargar, Col. E. R. Chambers, Clement Dale and T. H. Harter after which the meeting adjourned to meet next Friday night.

This was the most enthusiastic gathering of the Republicans held in Centre county for years and Republicans should be very much encouraged by the outlook.

POLITICAL NOTES.

The Republican County convention to name Centre's choice for State Senator to succeed the late Senator Patton will meet at Grange Park, Centre Hall on Republican Day, Thursday September 22.

Republican Day at Grangers Picnic is Thursday September 22. Republicans were fortunate in getting the big day this year and there should be a large attendance.

SENATOR PATTON AT REST.

The Funeral at Curwensville on Saturday Largely Attended.

The funeral of the late Senator Alexander E. Patton, took place from the Methodist Episcopal church in Curwensville on Saturday and was attended by a large concourse of people. Men from all walks of life were there, judges, senators, legislatcrs, bankers, editors, lawyers and business men all gathered to pay a tribute to this splendid citizen who had been so suddenly called home.

Senator Sproul, president protem of the Senate; Speaker Walton, of the house of representatives; and fifteen or twenty senators from all quarters of the state Judge Baker, of Cambria; Judge Love, of Centre; Judge Smith, and Ex-Judge Gordon, and Krebs, of Clearfield; Ex-Judge Furst, of Centre; Congressman Dresser, Ex-Congressman Arnold, J. K. P. Hall, of Ridgway; Senator Williams, of Butler; Senator Matson, of Bradford, Sissen, of Erie; Hon. John P. Elkin, Sergeant-at Arms Mack, were some of the distinguished men present at the funeral.

The days program began with a service at the home for the family at 10 a. m., by Rev. B. H. Mosser pastor of the M. E. church at Curwensville. The service was brief. The body was then taken to the M. E church, under escort of a detail from the Commandery to which the Senator belonged, the same remaining with the casket at the church until it was closed and the public services began at 1 p. m.

At 11 a. m. there was a memorial meeting at the Academy of Music. This meeting was called to order by Burgess Steere, who, after brief remarks, called upon Col. E. A. Irvin to preside. Colonel Irvin paid a fine tribute to the departed citizen. He was followed by others in the order named: Hon. James Kerr, of Clearfield, Col. J. L. Spangler, of Bellefonte, Senator Sproul, of Chester. Speaker Harry Walton, of the house of representatives, Senator E. A. Sisson, of Erie, Rembrant R Peale, of Lock Haven, ex-Judge A. V. Barker, of Johnstown, W. H. Sandford, of Patton, ex Judge Cyrus Gordon, of Clearfield Hon. W. C. Arnold, of DuBois, Hon John Patton, of Grand Rapids, Michigan.

At 1 p. m. the church service began. Dr. D. S. Monroe, of Shamokin, former presiding elder of the Altoona district, offered prayer and Rev. Dr. J. Ellis Bell, present presiding elder of the district, read the scripture lesson. The leading address was delivered by Dr. G. Edward Reed, president of Dickinson college, Carlisle, Pa. Rev. Dr. John A. Wood, Jr., of Bellefonte, a former pastor at Curwensville and Rev. Dr. Mosser, the present pastor, followed, and the latter also read an address written by the Hon. John Patton, a brother of the deceased, and in this representing the surviving relatives. Service closed with prayer by Rev. Dr. Foster, of Clearfield.

The interment was made in the beautiful cemetery overlooking the town.

The active pall bearers were B. M. Marlin, secretary of the Union Banking and Trust Co. DuBois; Hon. James Kerr, of Clearfield, L. W. Robinson, president of the R. and S. C. and I. Co. R. D. Swope, Esq., and Fred J. Dyer, of Curwensville, W. H. Sandford, cashier of the First National Bank, Patton, W. D. Bigler, and H. B. Powell, of Clearfield, Rembrant R. Peale, of Lock Haven, and John G. Platt, of Philipsburg. There were a number of honorary pall bearers named from among the dead senator's political and personal friends and associates.

30TH ANNUAL RE-UNION

Of the Centre County Veteran Club.

HELD AT HUNTER'S PARK

On Saturday September 10th---General Beaver Sends Intercsting Letter--Responded to by Committee

A LARGE CROWD IN ATTENDANCE.

When Saturday morning dawned it looked very much as though it would rain before the day was over, but at 8 o'clock the sun came out bright and warm, and great crowds wended their way to Hunters Park to be present at the Soldiers Reunion.

Without a doubt it was one of the most successful gatherings of this kind ever held by these old veterans, and everyone had a royal good time. Hunters Park was never known to look prettier and more romantic than it does this summer. The grounds and the lake are in excellent condition and the base ball field is fine.

Fully two thousand people were there from all over the county, brighing with them large baskets of the best kind of good things to eat, and as the day passed away it was evident everyone was having a royal good time.

The service and accommodation the railroad company furnished was the best that could be desired. The road bed under the supervision of Mr. Rishel has been greatly improved and it is certainly a pleasure to ride over the same.

The morning exercises opened with a prayer by Rev. Dr. Gill, of State College. Captain Patterson the 1st vice president, introduced Mr. Laird Holmes, of State College, who made the address of welcome, this was responded to by Rev. H. C. Holloway, D. D., of Bellefonte. After which addresses were made by Rev. Hartsock, of Kansas, S. B. Miller, Clement Dale, Esq., and D. F. Fortney, Esq. of Bellefonte Calvin Sowers, of State College and Dr. McIntyre, of Howord.

Committee on nomination of officers for the ensuing year were as follows:

S. B. Miller, Geo. Martz, D. F. Fortney, Geo. M. Keichline and Amos Garbrick, who nominated and afterwards elected James A. Beaver, president, J. C. Patterson, 1st vice president; W. H. Fry, 2nd vice president; W. H. Musser, secretary; Geo. M. Boal, treasurer.

Committee on place of meeting decided to hold the Reunion next year at Hecla Park.

The committee in charge wish through the columns of this paper to extend thanks to all who assisted in making the affair the success it was and especially to the State College band for furnishing the music.

The following interesting letter was received from Gen. Beaver which was responded to by D. F. Fortney.

BELLEFONTE, PA., Sept. 9th, 1904.

W. H. Musser, Esq., Secretary,
Bellefonte, Pa.,

MY DEAR COMRADES:—

My friend and comrade, Adjt. Muffly, formerly of this county and now of Des Moines, Iowa, in writing me the other day in regard to my late accident, said that he was reminded of a nursery rhyme which was taught the children, when he attended school at Howard to that prince of old-time school teachere, Samuel Baker, in which a juvenile rider is addressing his pony and begins the couplet, "Jump! jump! jump! do not hit that stump!" my failure to observe this admonition led to the difficulty which brought me under the surgeon's knife just forty years to a day after my leg was amputated.

Notwithstanding the serious character of the operation, I had hoped that it might be possible for me to be with you tomorrow, but, although my recovery has been as rapid as could be expected and as is consistent with safety, the Doctor thinks it would be altogether unsafe for me to venture out and subject myself to the fatigues of the day, I must content myself, therefore, with sending my greetings to my old comrades and my thanks for the interest which they have manifested in my welfare during my late trouble. This interest has manifested itself in so many ways that it only emphasizes to me the strength of the ties which bind us together. I have received so many letters, expressing an interest in my welfare, and so many inquiries through my comrades that I can only express my sense of obligation in this general way for the solicitude which has been manifested in my behalf.

There are one or two things of a practical sort which I would like to say and for the saying of these I accept your suggestion to write a line, to be read on the occasion of the reunion tomorrow.

As all are doubtless aware, the final contract for the erection of our soldier's monument has been consummated. The agreement has been signed by the Commissioners of Centre county, assuming the payment of $10,000, of the entire cost of the monument, by the State Commission for the erection of the statue of Gov. Curtin assuming $10,000 for its erection, leaving $13,000 to be raised and paid by the citizens of our county. Our Veteran Association, as you know, subcribed $1,000. If all outstanding obligations can be collected, we have the money now in hand to pay this subscription. Might it not be well for us to assume and promise at this meeting to pay an additional sum of—say $250.00, which we can doubtless raise in the ordinary way during the next two or three years?

Two other things are necessary for us to do, in order to carry out the details of the monument and bring the design to a successful completion. As you know, the design embraces the name of every soldier who enlisted from Centre county as well as those of others who have made Centre county their home since the war. In order to have these complete, it will be necessary to have an organization in every township in the county to secure the names, particularly of those who may have enlisted in organizations which were not raised in Centre county proper. There will be little difficulty in securing the names of the men of the 2nd, 7th, 10th, 15th, 5th Reserves, 45th, 49th, 53rd, 56th and 148th regiments of infantry, and the 1st, 2nd, 7th and 16th regiments of cavalry. There were a number of men, however, particularly in the border townships of the county, who enlisted in organizations from other counties and in deed from other states. We ought to be able to secure the names of every one of these men and, in order to do this, it will be essentially necessary that we make a careful and close canvass of every township, in order that the name of no Centre county man who enlisted in the service may be omitted. It is probably not the province of our Veteran Club to take charge of this matter but we can co-operate with our Monument Association in helping to secure these names and it is essential that we begin at once and prepare lists of all the men in the several townships who served in the Union Army during the Civil War. I mention this now, so that all who are interested in it may begin, each in his own neighborhood, to secure the names of such as are the least likely to be known, so that they may be communicated to the committees which are likely to be appointed by our Monument Association.

Another practical subject, requiring attention and earnest efforts, will be the raising of the additional amount necessary to complete our monument I cannot speak definitely as to the amount in hand and already pledged but, in a general way, I should say that it did not much exceed $8,000. It will, therefore, be necessary for us to raise in some way between this and the time of the completion of our monument at least $5,000. This will require a careful canvass of the county and a completion of the canvass in Bellefonte and other places where the effort to secure the amount necessary has already been partially made.

I speak of these things now, so that the thought of our veterans may be turned toward them and that they may be thinking of plans by which both the money necessary and the names of our comrades may be had in proper time for use in casting the bronze plates upon which the names are to be borne and in securing the money to pay for the monument by the time of its completion which is likely to be—say a year from this time. In this effort, let me bespeak the active and hearty co-operation of every member of our Veteran Club, of every old soldier in the county and of every friend of those who are deceased.

The idea of preserving the name of every man who served from the county is rather unique and commends itself to all who have learned of it but, in order to make it the success which it ought to be, we must be careful that not a single name is omitted. There will be plenty of room for every name but it will be difficult, after the plates are case, to add the names of any which may be omitted and it is,

A MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL

Attorneys for Green and Dillen Present Petition.

ON MONDAY MORNING.

Ask Court to Grant New Trial on Many Technicalities—Judge Love Will Hear Arguments Today

THEIR REASON GIVEN IN FULL.

On Monday the attorneys for William Dillen and Ira Green presented their motion in arrest of judgment for a new trial. Judge Love took the papers in the case and will hear arguments an today.

The defendants, William Dillen and Ira Green, move in arrest of Judgment and for a new trial for the following reasons:

1st. The verdict of the jury, viz: Guilty of murder in the first degree, is in violation of the evidence and the law of the land.

2nd. That the evidence to sustain a verdict of murder in the first degree was insufficient in this, that no intent to take life was shown on the part of the Commonwealth, which intent must exist in every case of the first degree murder.

3rd. That the evidence strongly showed the absence of an intent to kill, but simply an intent to escape from the jail, the Commonwealth having so proved by its own witness who saw part of the transaction and who heard the defendant say to the deceased "Do not make a noise and we will not hurt you."

4th. The Court erred in not instructing the jury clearly on this branch of the case.

5th. The Court erred in not presenting adequately to the jury the evidence on the part of the defendants.

6th. The Court erred in answer to defendants' seventh point in not absolutely and without qualification affirming the same, the defendants being entitled to an absolute affirmance thereof without qualification.

7th. The Court erred in not instructing the jury in its charge in reference to the effect of previous good character, to which the attention of the Court was called, by the seventh point.

8th. The Court erred in failing to call to the attention of the jury in its charge any notice of the previous good character of the defendants.

9th. The Court erred when counsel for the Commonwealth, viz: E. R. Chambers, in summing up to the jury rushed upon the prisoners and, with his fist drawn, in a passionate and vindictive manner, calling them cowards and repeating the same words with vehemence and in anger, and the attention of the Court was immediately drawn thereto by objection of counsel on the part of the defendants, in not publicly rebuking the counsel, and especially in not cautioning the jury in reference thereto, and that they should not be influenced by the unwanton and malicious attack of counsel upon the prisoners.

TENTH: The Court erred in not sustaining the challenge of defendants to the array of jurors, both grand and petit, and in not quashing the panel.

ELEVENTH: The Court erred in not holding as matter of law that it was mandatory on the commissioners in filling the jury wheel to make two lists thereof, one to be filed with the prothonotary of the court, and the other to be given to the sheriff to be placed in his office for the inspection of all persons interested or concerned in relation thereto, the uncontradicted evidence being that but one list was prepared and that none was given to the sheriff.

TWELFTH: The Court erred in refusing the application of the defendants for a continuance of the cause until a future time, because of the very great excitement in the community and the prejudice existing against the defendants, which prejudice was expressed publicly and continuously in the court room, in Bellefonte, and throughout the county up to the time of the trial.

THIRTEENTH: The Court erred in undue haste in pressing the cause to trial, well knowing the existence of the inflamed mind of the citizens generally, including the jury, against the prisoners, and the very great prejudice against them, and that an impartial trial could not be had at the then present term of court.

FOURTEENTH: The Court erred in not making an immediate order upon the application of Clement Dale for process and means to be furnished by the county that defendants might be able to obtain necessary evidence in their behalf by the summoning of witnesses, and to meet absolute expenses, the defendants being utterly without any means, and delaying the same until Wednesday morning, 24th of August, and then ordering that the case should be called on the following morning for trial, defendants not having sufficient time within which to secure the attendance of witnesses who were material in their defence, and who were living at a considerable distance in the state from Bellefonte; the extreme shortness of time preventing the defendants from obtaining more than two witnesses that could be reached by traveling night and day.

FIFTEENTH: The Court erred in pressing the case to trial so rapidly, when if a reasonable opportunity had been given, defendants could have obtained many witnesses showing their good character, not only for truth, but as peaceable and law-abiding citizens.

SIXTEENTH: Defendants further move for a new trial for the following reasons, that several of the jurors empanelled and sworn were biased and prejudiced against the prisoners; that they had formed and expressed an opinion of their guilt prior to the trial and upon their voir dire they denied any bias or prejudice against the prisoners, and that they had neither formed nor expressed an opinion with regard to their guilt or innocence, facts which were accepted and believed to be true by the defendants, but which subsequently to the trial defendants have learned were untrue.

SEVENTEENTH: That one of the jurors empanelled and sworn, and who testified upon his voir dire that he had neither bias or prejudice for or against the prisoners, that he had not formed nor expressed an opinion with regard to their guilt or innocence, a few minutes before he was called in the court house expressed to a by-stander and others an emphatic opinion that the necks of the prisoners should be stretched, referring to the hanging of them for this crime. This fact was unknown to the defendants and their counsel, and was learned for the first time on the 30th of August, 1904, two or three days after the verdict was rendered. That the same juror was violent in the jury room and made use of every effort to convict the defendants of murder in the first degree.

EIGHTEENTH: That another of the jurors empanelled and sworn in the cause, and who on his examination testified that he had not formed nor expressed an opinion with regard to the guilt or innocence of the defendants; that he had neither bias nor prejudice against them, said to others on the nineteenth day of Aug. 1904, that the defendants "should be hung, and that hanging was too good for them; that they should be burned at the stake like "niggers is the South." This juror was accepted upon his voir dire, but the fact of his prejudice and bias and expressed opinion was unknown to the defendants or their counsel until after the rendition of the verdict.

NINETEENTH: That some twelve talesman were called without authority of law by Dr. S. M. Huff, coroner; that no authority was shown which authorized the calling of jurors by a coroner.

TWENTIETH: That in a proper case where a coroner is called in to act as, for and in the place of the sheriff of the county, he, in the performance of such duty, acts as sheriff, and therefore the law requires him to be sworn as sheriff in the performance of such duty. The coroner in this case was unsworn.

TWENTY-FIRST: That the coroner was directed by the court to call jurors de circumstantibus; that instead of so doing, he called persons who were not in the court house, and the names of one or more of the talesman were suggested to him by others; that he even called one of the witnesses for the Commonwealth, whose name was endorsed upon the indictment.

TWENTY-SECOND: That the verdict of the jury was not the free and voluntary conclusion and agreement of the entire jury. That the verdict was influenced by prejudice in the minds of some of the jurors and by previously expressed opinions of the defendants' guilt. That one or more of the jurors was guilty of exceeding misconduct in endeavoring to coerce and did coerce fellow jurors to agree upon a verdict of guilty in the first degree. That one of the jurors, whose judgment was in favor of second degree, took very ill in the jury room and became so sick that he could not remain there longer, and fearing for his health, (being a man of advanced years) only agreed to the verdict rendered because he was unable to remain longer in confinement.

TWENTY-THIRD: That defendants did not have a fair and impartial trial; that their case was prejudged; that they were forced on to trial without without having time and means to secure testimony, which can be adduced if opportunity be afforded. That the trial was forced on with undue haste. That many of the jurors selected were prejudiced, had expressed opinions which remained with them during the entire trial and influenced their judgment and the verdict.

No more import project in the national preparation for possible war has received governmental sanction than the adoption of the plan for a national marksman's reserve submitted by General Bird W. Spencer, President of the National Rifle Association. The National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice has worked diligently and intelligently for the encouragement of rifle practice in this country and the proposition for a reserve of marksmen promises to furnish within a few years more than one million men in this country who will be qualified to go on the firing line, if necessary, possessing all the attributes of the trained soldier. This is a result which should meet with favor everywhere; it should have the support of Congress and the state legislatures and it should be endorsed by individuals throughout the country. It imposes no great expense upon the government, which is most benefited by the organization, and furnishes to the country, available for its military demands in a time of emergency, an army of expert rifle shots, made up of young men and boys over fifteen years of age. The idea ought not to lack for popular approval on every hand. Its object is most commendable as its results are bound to be profitable.

What Lewisburg Thinks of Our Coleville Band.

Below is a little clipping taken from the Lewisburg Journal in which they speak in the highest terms of our Coleville Band.

Ample music was here and some of the best bands in the central part of the state participate in the parade. The Coleville band of Bellefonte won for themselves the admiration of the people of Lewisburg and the visitors for their high class concerts and liberal music which they rendered during the day. They were dressed in bright red uniforms and presented a fine appearance.

Married.

On Thursday September 8th, Mr. Ira D. Gray and Miss Ina S. Payne, both of Philipsburg, were married at the U. B. parsonage in Bigler. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. R. Dillen.

"And Miss Tuttle shrieked at seeing a police officer?"

"Yes, and sprang forward."

"Did she say anything?"

"Not then."

"What did she do?"

"Waited for him to speak."

"Which he did?"

"At once and very brutally. He asked if she was Mrs. Jeffrey's sister, and when she nodded and gasped 'Yes,' he blurted out that Mrs. Jeffrey was dead; that he had just come from the old house in Waverley avenue, where she had just been found."

"And Miss Tuttle?"

"Didn't know what to say; just hid her face. She was leaning against the newel post, so it was easy for her to do so. I remember that the man stared at her for taking it so quietly and asking no questions."

"And did she speak at all?"

"Oh, yes, afterward. Her face was wrapped in the folds of her cloak, but I heard her whisper as if to herself: 'No, no! That old hearth is not a lodestone. She cannot have fallen there.' And then she looked up quite wildly and cried: 'There is something more! Something which you have not told me!' 'She shot herself, if that's what you mean.' Miss Tuttle's arms went straight up over her head. It was awful to see her. 'Shot herself?' she gasped. 'Oh, Veronica, Veronica!' 'With a pistol,' he went on—I suppose he was going to say, 'tied to her wrist,' but he never got it out, for Miss Tuttle at the word 'pistol' clapped her hands to her ears and for a moment looked quite distracted, so that he thought better of worrying her any more and only demanded to know if Mr. Jeffrey kept any such weapon.

"Miss Tuttle's face grew very strange at this. 'Mr. Jeffrey! Was he there?' she asked. The man looked surprised. 'They are searching for Mr. Jeffrey,' he replied. 'Isn't he here?' 'No,' came both from her lips and mine. The man acted very impertinently. 'You haven't told me whether a pistol was kept here or not,' said he. Miss Tuttle tried to compose herself, but I saw that I should have to speak if any one did, so I told him that Mr. Jeffrey did have a pistol, which he kept in one of his bureau drawers. But when the officer wanted Miss Tuttle to go up and see if it was there she shook her head and made for the front door, saying that she must be taken directly to her sister."

"And did no one go up? Was no attempt made to see if the pistol was or was not in the drawer?"

"Yes; the officer went up with me. I pointed out the place where it was kept, and he rummaged all through it, but found no pistol. I didn't expect him to"— Here the witness paused and bit her lip, adding confusedly, "Mr. Jeffrey had taken it, you see."

The jurors, who sat very much in the shadow, had up to this point attracted but little attention. But now they began to make their presence felt, perhaps because the break in the witness' words had been accompanied by a sly look at Jinny. Possibly warned by this that something lay back of this hitherto timid witness' sudden volubility, one of them now spoke up.

"In what room did you say this pistol was kept?"

"In Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey's bedroom, sir; the room opening out of the sitting room where Mrs. Jeffrey had kept herself shut up all day."

"Does this bedroom of which you speak communicate with the hall as well as with the sitting room?"

"No, sir; it is the defect of the house. Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey often spoke of it as a great annoyance. You had to pass through the little boudoir in order to reach it."

The juryman sank back, evidently satisfied with her replies, but we who marked the visible excitement with which the witness had answered this seemingly unimportant question wondered what special interest surrounded that room and the pistol to warrant the heightened color with which the girl answered this new interlocutor. We were not destined to know at this time, for the coroner, when he spoke again, pursued a different subject.

"How long was this before Mr. Jeffrey came in?"

"Only a few minutes. I was terribly frightened at being left there alone and was on my way to ask one of the other girls to come up and stay with me when I heard his key in the lock and came back. He had entered the house and was standing near the door talking to an officer, who had evidently come in with him. It was a different officer from the one who had gone away with Miss Tuttle. Mr. Jeffrey was saying: 'What's that? My wife hurt!' 'Dead, sir!' blurted out the man. I had expected to see Mr. Jeffrey terribly shocked, but not in so awful a way. It really frightened me to see him and I turned to run, but found that I couldn't and that I had to stand still and look whether I wanted to or not. Yet he didn't say a word or ask a question."

"What did he do, Loretta?"

"I cannot say. He was on his knees and was white—oh, how white! You he looked up when the man described how and where Mrs. Jeffrey had been found and even turned toward me when I said something about his wife having left a message for him when she went out. This message, which I almost hesitated to give after the awful news of her death, was about the ending of some story, as you remember, and it seemed heartless to speak of it at a moment like this, but as she had told me to I didn't dare to disobey her. So, with the man listening to my every word, and Mr. Jeffrey looking as if he would fall to the ground before I could finish, I repeated her words to him and was surprised enough when he suddenly started upright and went flying upstairs. But I was more surprised yet when, at the top of the first flight, he stopped and, looking over the balustrade, asked in a very strange voice where Miss Tuttle was. For he seemed just then to want her more than anything else in the world and looked beaten and wild when I told him that she was already gone to Waverley avenue. But he recovered himself before the man could draw near enough to see his face, and rushed into the sitting room above and shut the door behind him, leaving the officer and me standing down by the front door.

"As I didn't know what to say to a man like him, and he didn't know what to say to me, the time seemed long, but it couldn't have been very many minutes before Mr. Jeffrey came back with a slip of paper in his hand and a very much relieved look on his face. 'The deed was premeditated!' he cried. 'My unfortunate wife has misunderstood my affection for her!' And from being a very much broken down man he stood up straight and tall and prepared himself very quietly to go to the Moore house. That is all I can tell about the way the news was received by him."

Were these details necessary? Many appeared to regard them as futile and uncalled for, but Coroner Z. was never known to waste time on trivialities, and if he called for these facts those who knew him best felt certain that they were meant as a preparation for Mr. Jeffrey's testimony, which was now called for.

CHAPTER XII.

WHEN Francis Jeffrey's hand fell from his forehead and he turned to face the assembled people an instinctive compassion arose in every breast at sight of his face, which, if not open in its expression, was at least surcharged with the deepest misery.

I pass over the preliminary examination of this important witness and proceed at once to the point where the coroner, holding out the two or three lines of writing which Mr. Jeffrey had declared to have been left him by his wife, asked:

"Are these words in your wife's handwriting?"

Mr. Jeffrey replied hastily and with just a glance at the paper offered him:

"They are."

The coroner pressed the slip upon him.

"Look at them carefully," he urged. "The handwriting shows hurry and in places is scarcely legible. Are you ready to swear that these words were written by your wife and by no other?"

Mr. Jeffrey, with just a slight contraction of his brow expressive of annoyance, did as he was bid. He scanned, or appeared to scan, the small scrap of paper which he now took into his own hand.

"It is my wife's writing," he impatiently declared; "written, as all can see, under great agitation of mind, but hers without any doubt."

"Will you read aloud these words for our benefit?" asked the coroner.

The lines he was thus called upon to read may bear repetition:

I find that I do not love you as I thought. I cannot live knowing this to be so. Pray God you may forgive me!

VERONICA.

As the last word fell with a little tremble from Mr. Jeffrey's lips the coroner repeated:

"You still think these words were addressed to you by your wife; that in short they contain an explanation of her death?"

"I do."

There was sharpness in the tone. Mr. Jeffrey was feeling the prick. There was agitation in it, too, an agitation he was trying hard to keep down.

"You have reason, then," persisted the coroner, "for accepting this peculiar explanation of your wife's death, a death which, in the judgment of most people, was of a nature to call for the strongest provocation possible?"

"My wife was not herself. My wife was in an overstrained and suffering condition. For one so nervously overwrought many allowances must be made. She may have been conscious of not responding fully to my affection. That this feeling was strong enough to induce her to take her life is a source of unspeakable grief to me, but one for which you must find explanation, as I have so often said, in the terrors caused by the dread event at the [illegible] or, rather [illegible]

Impaired Digestion

May not be all that is meant by dyspepsia now, but it will be if neglected.

The uneasiness after eating, fits of nervous headache, sourness of the stomach, and disagreeable belching may not be very bad now, but they will be if the stomach is suffered to grow weaker.

Dyspepsia is such a miserable disease that the tendency to it should be given early attention. This is completely overcome by which strengthens the whole digestive system

called old tragedies and emphasized a most unhappy family tradition."

The coroner paused a moment to let these words sink into the ears of the jury, then plunged immediately into what might be called the offensive part of his examination.

"Why, if your wife's death caused you such intense grief, did you appear so relieved at receiving this by no means consoling explanation?"

At an implication so unmistakably suggestive of suspicion Mr. Jeffrey showed fire for the first time.

"Whose word have you for that? A servant's, so newly come into my house that her very features are still strange to me. You must acknowledge that a person of such marked inexperience can hardly be thought to know me or to interpret rightly the feelings of my heart by any passing look she may have surprised upon my face."

This attitude of defiance so suddenly assumed had an effect he little realized. Miss Tuttle stirred for the first time behind her veil, and Uncle David, from looking bored, became suddenly quite attentive. These two but mirrored the feelings of the general crowd, and mine especially.

"We do not depend on her judgment alone," the coroner now remarked. "The change in you was apparent to many others. This we can prove to the jury if they require it."

But, no man lifting a voice from that gravely attentive body, the coroner proceeded to inquire if Mr. Jeffrey felt like volunteering any explanations on this head. Receiving no answer from him either, he dropped the suggestive line of inquiry and took up the consideration of facts. The first question he now put was:

The disputed writing

"Where did you find the slip of paper containing 'these last words from your wife?'"

"In a book I picked out of the bookshelf in our room upstairs. When Loretta gave me my wife's message I knew that I should find some word from her in the novel we had just been reading. As we had been interested in but one book since our marriage, there was no possibility of my making any mistake as to which one she referred."

"Will you give us the name of this novel?"

"'Compensation.'"

"And you found this book called 'Compensation' in your room upstairs?"

"Yes."

"On the bookshelf?"

"Yes."

"Where does this bookshelf stand?"

Mr. Jeffrey looked up as much as to say, "Why so many small questions about so simple a matter?" but answered frankly enough:

"At the right of the door leading into the bedroom."

"And at right angles to the door leading into the hall?"

"Yes."

"Very good. Now may I ask you to describe the cover of this book?"

"The cover? I never noticed the cover. Why do you— Excuse me, I suppose you have your reasons for asking even these puerile and seemingly unnecessary questions. The cover is a queer one, I believe, partly red and partly green, and that is all I know about it."

Miss Tuttle and Uncle David listening to the evidence

"Is this the book?"

Mr. Jeffrey glanced at the volume the coroner held up before him.

"I believe so; it looks like it."

The book had a flaming cover, quite unmistakable in its character.

"The title shows it to be the same," remarked the coroner. "Is this the only book with a cover of this kind in the house?"

"The only one, I should say."

The coroner laid down the book.

"Enough of this, then, for the present; only let the jury remember that the cover of this book is peculiar and that it was kept on a shelf at the right of the opening leading into the adjoining bedroom. And now, Mr. Jeffrey, we [illegible] you [illegible] or, rather [illegible] you placed on Mrs. Jeffrey's hand when you were married to her a little over a fortnight ago. You recognize it?"

"I do."

"Do you also recognize this small mark of blood on it as having been here when it was shown to you by the detective on your return from seeing her dead body at the Moore house?"

"I do; yes."

"How do you account for that spot and the slight injury made to her finger? Should you not say that the ring had been dragged from her hand?"

"I should."

"By whom was it dragged? By you?"

"No, sir."

"By herself, then?"

"It would seem so."

"Much passion must have been in that act. Do you think that any ordinary quarrel between husband and wife would account for the display of such fury? Are we not right in supposing a deeper cause for the disturbance between you than the slight one you offer in way of explanation?"

An inaudible answer; then a sudden straightening of Francis Jeffrey's fine figure. And that was all.

"Mr. Jeffrey, in the talk you had with your wife on Tuesday morning was Miss Tuttle's name introduced?"

"It was mentioned; yes, sir."

"With recrimination or any display of passion on the part of your wife?"

"You would not believe me if I said no," was the unexpected rejoinder.

The coroner, taken aback by this direct attack from one who had hitherto borne all his innuendoes with apparent patience, lost countenance for a moment, but, remembering that in his official capacity he was more than a match for the elegant gentleman, who under other circumstances would have found it only too easy to put him to the blush, he observed with dignity:

"Mr. Jeffrey, you are on oath. We certainly have no reason for not believing you."

Mr. Jeffrey bowed. He was probably sorry for his momentary loss of self control, and gravely, but with eyes bent downward, answered with the abrupt phrase:

"Well, then, I will say no."

The coroner shifted his ground.

"Will you make the same reply when I ask if the like forbearance was shown toward your wife's name in the conversation you had with Miss Tuttle immediately afterward?"

"Miss Tuttle was Mrs. Jeffrey's half sister. The bond between them was strong. Would she—would I—be apt to speak of my young wife with bitterness?"

"That is not an answer to my question, Mr. Jeffrey. I must request a more positive reply."

"There were no recriminations uttered. Mrs. Jeffrey had displeased me, and I said so, but I did not forget that I was speaking of my wife and to her sister."

As this was in the highest degree noncommittal, the coroner could be excused for persisting.

"The conversation, then, was about your wife?"

"It was."

"In criticism of her conduct?"

"Yes."

"At the ambassador's ball?"

"Yes."

Mr. Jeffrey was a poor hand at lying. That last "yes" came with great effort.

The coroner waited, possibly for the echo of this last "yes" to cease; then he remarked with a coldness which lifted at once the veil from his hitherto well disguised antagonism to this witness:

"If you will recount to us anything which your wife said or did on that evening which, in your mind, was worthy of all this coil, it might help us to understand the situation."

But the witness made no attempt to do so, and while many of us were ready to pardon him this show of delicacy others felt that under the circumstances it would have been better had he been more open.

Among the latter was the coroner himself, who from this moment threw aside all hesitation and urged forward his inquiries in a way to press the witness closer and closer toward the net he was secretly holding out for him. First, he obliged him to say that his conversation with Miss Tuttle had not tended to smooth matters, that no reconciliation with his wife had followed it and that in the thirty-six hours which elapsed before he returned home again he had made no attempt to soothe the feelings of one who, according to his own story, he considered hardly responsible for any extravagances in which she might have indulged.

Then when this inconsistency had been given time to sink into the minds of the jury Coroner Z. increased the effect produced by confronting Jeffrey with witnesses who testified to the friendly, if not loverlike, relations which had existed between himself and Miss Tuttle prior to the appearance of his wife upon the scene, closing with a question which brought out the denial, by no means new, that an engagement had ever taken place between him and Miss Tuttle and hence that a bond had been canceled by his marriage with Miss Moore.

Some hint of what the coroner contemplated had already escaped him in the persistent and seemingly inconsequent questions to which he had subjected this witness. But the time had now come for a more direct attack, and the interest rose correspondingly high when the coroner, lifting again to sight the scrap of paper containing the few piteous lines so often quoted, asked of the now anxious and agitated witness if he had ever noticed any similarity between the handwriting of [illegible] Tuttle.

KUROPATKIN'S RETREAT

Such is The News Sent Out From St. Petersburg

THE JAPS PURSUING

Frightful Experiences of ths Soldiers of Both the Czar and the Mikado in Awful Race for Mukden.

LOSS WILL APPROXIMATE 50,000 MEN.

ST. PETERSBURG, September 8.—(2:02 a. m. Thursday.)—The General Staff is not displaying great anxiety over the alarmist reports that General Kuropatkin is in serious danger of being cut off, but if they had any information from the front Wednesday they have not revealed it. The members also decline to say, even if they know, whether General Kuropatkin purposes taking his army north of Mukden.

An officer of the General Staff said to the Associated Press Wednesday night:

"I believe it is safe to say that General Kuropatkin's army is now out of danger. Our advices since Monday indicate that the fighting is of an insignificant character, and I do not believe that the tired Japanese troops are capable of seriously threatening the line of retreat. The greatest difficulty our army is now having to contend with is the terrible roads owing to the rains of Monday and Tuesday.

"Our information is that the bulk of the baggage has already passed through Mukden. This is the usual procedure in the case of any retreat."

BOTH ARMIES ARE EXHAUSTED.

Kuropatkin's movements, after all, must depend chiefly on the tactics of the Japanese, with whom lies the initiative. If the Japanese continue to press north in hope of cutting off the Russians and bringing them to bay, then Kuropatkin will be obliged to move north to circumvent them. But both armies already are terribly exhausted, and if they again come into grip the result will depend largely upon which of them is able to throw the most fresh reserves into the fight.

If there is a race northward it is apparent that the greatest danger will come at the narrow defile of Tiebling, north of Mukden, but the authorities seem fairly well satisfied with the situation and are confident of its ultimate outcome.

MUKDEN, September 7.—News of a fight at some point between Shakne, eleven miles northwest of Liao-Yang, and Mukden is hourly expected.

Among the reports current here is one to the effect that General Kuroki has been killed and that two Japanese Generals have been made prisoners, but no one seems to know where the reports originated and no confirmation is obtainable.

General Baron Kuroki Tamesada was born in 1844 in the city of Kogoshima, Japan, of pure Samurai blood, not hal. Polish as has been reported.

By an interesting coincidence Marquis Oyama and Admiral Toga are also of this same city. He has been a soldier from his youth.

In the stormy days of the Restoration, when the New Japan was born, Kuroki fought with credit. He had a share in the Satsuma rebellion, and was at the capture of Wei-Hai-Wei in the Chinese-Japanese war.

His services in the Satsuma rebellion won him the chieftainship of a sub-company.

A few years later he was made captain of a sub-company of the body-guard of the Emperor, and rapidly advancing became Major and then Lieutenant Colonel.

In the concluding 180 days of practically continuous fighting which marked the triumph of Choshu over Satsuma, of the new order over the old, Kuryki won notable distinction,

Then came the Chinese-Japanese war. Kuroki managed the mobilization of all Japan's troops, and later commanded a division in China.

History records how he took Wei-Hai-Wei. His force stormed and took in a single day eleven of twelve forts, strongly defended, aided by Chinese warships in the harbor. The feat made him Japan's foremost soldier.

He has sustained that reputation from the day the first of his guns boomed across the Yalu until his troops swept back Kuropatkin's flank and settled the outcomeof the battle of Liao-Yang.

CHE FOO, September 9. (1.30 a. m.) —A Japanese column, numbering approximately 700 men, while marching along at night on a road in the valley between Long Hill and Division Hill, met with a frightful disaster through the explosion of an electric land mine, September 1. The mine was carefully laid by the Russians three weeks ago. It covered nearly a mile of available marching space. The explosive was placed at the bottom. Rocks were placed next and on top of these clay was packed so carefully that the ground gave the impression of not having been disturbed. The indications of Japanese activity in this vicinity put the Russians on guard. Near midnight the outposts rushed in and reported that the Japanese were approaching. The Russians withheld their fire for some time. Suddenly they threw a searchlight on the valley.

The Japanese opened with a rifle fire. The Russians waited until apparently the whole Japanese column was in the danger zone. Then the mine was exploded. The force of the explosion knocked a number of the Russians down, and the sight of Japanese rifles, water bottles, legs and arms hurling through the lighted place made by the searchlight was an awful spectacle. Some rocks landed inside the Russian lines. There was one appalling moment, during which the garrison itself was stunned, then a death-like silence. The searchlight coldly lighted up the road and hillsides strewn with the dead. The following day the Russians buried the dead, but owing to their dismembered and multilated condition the Russians were unable to accurately estimate the number of killed. A few Japanese escaped, however.

ST. PETERSBURG, September 10, (1:50 a. m.)—It seems to be definitely established that Field Marshall Oyama's tired troops practically abandoned on Wednesday the attempt to head off General Kuropatkin, and the latter's army has arrived safely at Mukden after frightful experiences in floundering through mud and mire over the Mandarin road.

SCENES ALMOST INCREDIBLE.

Some descriptions of the scenes along the line of retreat are almost incredible. They tell how the men lay down in the mud and slept in a drenching rain and without shelter.

In is evident that the last determined effort of the Japanese to bring Kuropatkin to bay was made on Tuesday, but the Russian commander-in-chief faced about and two corps with artillery beat off the Japanese while the remainder of the troops continued to march to Mukden. After that the Japanese could only hang on to the flanks and try to shell the retreating columns from the hills.

The outposts are still in contact, but they are not even exchanging shots.

HORRIBLE PLIGHT OF TROOPS.

A late Associated Press dispatch sent tonigh, from Mukden describes the horrible plight of the tentless and shelterless soldiers.

Bhe detailed statement of Russian losses which it is promised will be issued Saturday, is awaited with intense interest. The general expectation is that the losses will approximate 20,000 as against 30,000 for the Japanese.

DISPOSING OF THE DEAD.

The work of burying the dead was left to the Japanese, who were forced to attempt the task as a matter of self-preservation, but it was almost impossible. The awful rains have handicapped the work of cremation on which the Japanese relied and only shallow trench burials were possible under the circumstances. Not only is this work one of greatest difficulty, but it is almost valueless from a sanitary standpoint, the storms undoing it soon after it is accomplished.

CARE OF THE WOUNDED.

The care of the wounded has taxed the hospitals to the utmost. One correspondent says that 12,000 wounded has passed through the Mukden hospitals up to Sunday, and only the most severe cases could be attended to by the nurses and surgeons. Many, therefore, had to be left to the rough but well meant care of their comrades.

POSITION OF THE ARMIES.

LONDON, September 10.—The Daily Express claims to have trustworthy information that the Russian army is divided into five columns. The first has reached Tie Pass, 40 miles north of Mukden, and is preparing to defend that place against the Japanese. The second is midway between Mukden and Tie Pass. The third is at Mukden. The fourth, consisting of forty thousand men under General Meyendorff, is holding Kuroki in check by hard fighting twelve miles south of Mukden. The fifth, of about 12,000 men, is further south, exhausted by incessant fighting, and is surrounded on three sides by the Japanese, its position being one of extreme danger, from which it can hardly hope to escape.

Everything now depends says the paper on Meyendorff's ability to hold Kuroki in check, which so far has been successfully done.

17th ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED.

Mr. and Mrs. George Grimm Entertain at Their Home.

Seventeen years ago on Wednesday evening Mr. George Grimm, the present Superintendent at the Nittany Furnace, was united in marriage to Miss E. M Smith near Pittsburg.

To this happy union was born, two daughters, who have grown to womanhood and who are the happiness and joy of their home. To commemorate this happy occasion Mr. and Mrs. Grimm celebrated their 17th wedding anniversary at their pretty home on Thomas street on Wednesday evening at which 17 persons were present

The wedding ceremony was performed as it was seventeen years ago, and Mrs. Grimm looked just as pretty and happy and Mr. Grimm as handsome as on that eventful evening back in that little home near Pittsburg.

Rev. John Wood was not the parson that spoke the words that made this happy young couple man and wife, but he said the words last evening that sealed the bond tighter for life. Mrs. Wood presided at the piano and as the strains of the beautiful Lohengren wedding march pealed forth, Mr. and Mrs. Grimm entered the parlor. The bride-maids were Mrs. John Olewine and Mrs. Jacob Smith, the flower girl was Mrs. James Barnhart. The ushers were Messrs Wagner Geiss and Dr. Ward. The parlor and dining room were beautifully and artistically decorated in white interspersed with green.

Mr. and Mrs. Grimm received many handsome presents among which were a dozen solid silver table spoons. The refreshments that were served were delicious. The evening was joyfully passed in singing and playing flinch.

Those present were Rev. John Wood Jr. and wife; Mr. and Mrs. Wagner Geiss and son George; Mr. and Mrs. James Barnhart; Mr. and Mrs. John Olewine; Mr. and Mrs Jacob Smith and Dr. Ward and wife with Mr. and Mrs. Grimm and their two daughters making the seventeen.

The occasion was one long to be remembered. The bride and groom were showered with congratulations and best wishes from their many friends, in which the Republican joins to say "May you both live long and prosper."

A LASTING EFFECT

This Evidence Should Prove Every Claim Made for Doan's Kidney Pills in Bellefonte.

Relief from the pains and aches of a bad back is always welcome to every backache sufferer but to curea lame, weak or aching back is what's wanted. Cure it so it will stay cured. It can be done. Here's the strongest evidence to prove it:

Wm. E. Haines living at 133 W. Beaver St., says "I have had no occasion to use any kidney medicine since 1896. It was at that time I was cured by Doan's Kidney Pills and I made a statement for publication recommending them. The cure has proved to be permanent and it gives me pleasure to once more endorse Doan's Kidney Pills. Before I used this preparation I had been suffering for six years with a lameness of the back and a dull lingering aching over the kidneys accompanied with severe pains in the head. My eyes pained me. Being on night work I had to have my rest during the day but when I was in this condition I could not get any rest at all, and was, in fact unfit to work. Reading of the many cures made in Bellefonte by Doan's Kidney Pills I got a box at the Bush Block Drug Store. They banished the whole trouble, and during the past eight years I have had no return of it. With this proof I am well able to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

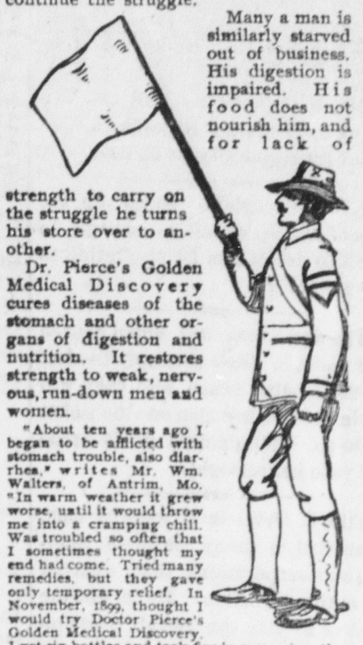
STARVED OUT.

Many a garrison has been forced to give up the fight and hang out the white flag of surrender, when lack of food has weakened the men past all power to continue the struggle.



Many a man is similarly starved out of business. His digestion is impaired. His food does not nourish him, and for lack of strength to carry on the struggle he turns his store over to another.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It restores strength to weak, nervous, run-down men and women.

"About ten years ago I began to be afflicted with stomach trouble, also diarrhea," writes Mr. Wm. Walters, of Antrim, Mo. "In warm weather it grew worse, until it would throw me into a cramping chill. Was troubled so often that I sometimes thought my end had come. Tried many remedies, but they gave only temporary relief. In November, 1899, thought I would try Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I got six bottles and took five in succession, then thought I would wait for a time and take the one left. Soon found I had symptoms of the trouble coming back, so took the sixth bottle and it cured me. I have enjoyed the best of health this summer, and the credit all belongs to your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I can't express my many thanks to Dr. Pierce for his remedy, for it did so much for me. Words cannot express how severely I suffered.

"If any doubt the above statement let them address me, and I will take great pleasure in answering."

Like a Comet

This famous remedy does for the stomach that which it is unable to do for itself, even if but slightly disordered or overburdened.

Kodol supplies the natural juices of digestion and does the work of the stomach, relaxing the nervous tension, while the inflamed muscles and membranes of that organ are allowed to rest and heal. It cures indigestion, flatulence, palpitation of the heart, nervous dyspepsia and all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying and strengthening the glands, membranes of the stomach and digestive organs.

In the sky comes the star of health to the weak and weary despondent dyspeptic, curing all stomach troubles and digestive disorders.

Chairman.

The election of Orvis to the bench would entail a great expense to the tax payers of Centre County. He is interested in cases that will be coming up in Centre county courts for five years to come and as a result judges from other counties would have to be brought here entailing heavy expense which you Mr. Taxpayer would have to pay. Better let well enough alone, don't you think?

Have you heard the news from Maine?

EDITORIAL.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

FOR STATE SENATOR.

We are authorized to announce the name of HENRY C. QUIGLEY as a candidate for State Senator subject to the decision of the Republican county Primaries

Maine follows the lead of Vermont by electing a Republican Governor by a plurality of 33.000.

J. Will Kepler's record on the school teacher's bill is enough in itself to defeat him for re-election to the assembly.

The democrats will move heaven and earth in their attempts to elect Orvis to the bench and they will trade every other man on the ticket to do so. Republicans don't trade but vote her straight.

Ellis L. Orvis is a wealthy man, interested in many business interests and corporations that demand his entire attention. He is not the kind of a man the people want on the bench and they will decide next November to leave him where he is.

The Centre Democrat in last week's issue devoted two columns to a personal attack on Judge Love and an attempt to create dissension and strife in the Republican party. As to Judge Love we heard many prominent democrats say it made votes for him. It certainly did not hurt him. The democrats are resorting to their old tricks of stirring up old sores among republicans but we think they have made a mistake. The Republicans have determined to stand together, let bygones be bygones and present a solid front to the foe and victory will surely come to a united republican party in Centre county this fall.

The Centre Democrat last week made a great hulla-baloo about the Confer case at Howard. We understand the article was written by the Democratic judicial candidate himself and if so it shows mighty poor taste on his part. We do not know the merits of the case but are glad Mr. Confer got what he did out of it, but if the facts alleged are true it leaves his generous friend and legal adviser in not a very creditable light. The generous friend who furnished the money to carry the case to the Supreme Court was Burdine Butler. Burdine knows how to get after the almighty dollar and as a result of his wonderful generosity in aiding Mr. Confer he is alleged to have taken $1600 out of the verdict of $4,000 the poor man received from the Pennsylvania Railroad. Further it is alleged that Ellis L. Orvis who is now attempting to gain political prestige out of the case charged poor Confer $1200 for his legal services. Confer's friends however impressed upon him the injustice of this charge and the former finally secured a reduction after threatening legal proceedings against Orvis.

therefore, of the first importance that we should not only be careful in securing the names but in having every name in full and each one properly spelled. The mistakes of Bates' History and of other published rolls must be carefully corrected. It might be well, as you have opportunity, to furnish to our Secretary, who is also the Secretary of the Monument Association, a list of names from the several townships from which a selection of a proper committee for securing the names for the monument might be appointed.

Hoping that you may have a good day and an enjoyable time and regretting the providence which prevents my sharing with you the pleasure of the occasion, I am

Head Quarters of the Centre County Veteran Club, Hunters Park, Sept. 10, '04.

To GEN. JAMES A BEAVER,
President of the Club:

DEAR COMRADE: Your kindly greeting to your comrades of the Veteran Club, is acknowledged, and while we regret, exceedingly, your absence on this occasion, and the accident which causes it, we rejoice to know that you are on the high way to a speedy and complete recovery.

In the past you have rendered not only conspicuous but heroic service to our country in the great struggle which made us comrades. As Governor of the Commonwealth you have served her people faithfully and honorably and on her annals you must stand as one of the noblest and bravest of her sons. We express the hope and prayers that many years of life, health, strength and happiness shall yet be given you, by our Heavenly Father, in which you may continue to serve the State as an honored member of one of her highest courts.

It must be gratifying to you and your loved ones, to have the pure and unfeigned expression of love and sympathy which we know has gone out to you in your affliction, not only from your comrades who are bound to you by ties, welded on fields of battle amid scenes of blood, but from all of your neighbors, friends, and follow-citizens who appreciate the honorable, patriotic, upright and christian life you have lived.

Again expressing the sincere hope that your recovery will be rapid and complete and that those who will be at our next annual meeting shall have the pleasure of greeting you. We are very truly your comrades.

IN A PRAIRIE SCHOONER.

Aged Minister and His Wife on a Long Journey.

On their homeward journey after a trip by camp wagon over nearly 3,000 miles of country, Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Harrison of New York city drove into Bellefonte Wednesday and remained over night. The inscription on the wagon reads as follows: "An Aged Couple on a Long Journey from New York to Atlanta and back. Potato Peelers 10 cents each—Please buy one." The occupants are an aged couple traveling through the country for their health and holding prayer meetings as they go. Mr. H., is a minister of the Christian denomination and at one time was engaged in the pottery business at Liverpool, England. He was a business man of Newark, N. J., when his health failed and he decided to make an open air tour to Atlanta, Ga.. A wagon 10x5 1—5 feet was fitted up and a horse engaged for their journey. As a means of sustenance the couple decided to make potato peelers on their journey and sell them at the close of his speeches.

A hearty appetite does not always indicate a healthy condition. It is not the quantity of food which is eaten but the quantity which is assimilated, which determines the actual value of the food consumed. If the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition cannot convert the food into nourishment, and into blood, then the food is an injury instead of a benefit. For all disorders of the stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition, there is a certain remedy in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It removes clogging obstructions. It strengthens the stomach, nourishes the nerves, enriches the blood and builds up the body. It is a flesh-forming, muscle making preparation, making firm flesh instead of flabby fat. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whiskey or intoxicant of any kind, and is equally free from opium, cocaine and all narcotics.

Card of Thanks.

Mrs. Arvilla Gengher wishes through the columns of this paper to thank her many friends for their kindness during the sickness and death of her son Joseph A Gengher.

—Don't delay a minute. Cholera infantum, dysentery, diarrhoea come suddenly. Only safe plan is to have Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry always on hand.

FAIRBANKS AND CANNON

Will Head Republican Orators In Stumping Pennsylvania.

PENROSE IS WORKING HARD

This State Has Been Especially Favored By the Assignment of Prominent Men to Speak For the Republican Ticket.

[Special Correspondence.]

Philadelphia, Sept. 13.

Pennsylvania Republicans are being especially favored in the present campaign.

Notwithstanding the fact that this state is admittedly going to give Roosevelt and Fairbanks a glorious majority, the national leaders of the Republican party have shown unusual consideration for the Republican organization of Pennsylvania. They recognize that Pennsylvania is a great power not only in the Republican organization of the nation, but in the congress of the United States. Pennsylvania has next to the largest number of delegates sent from any state to the Republican national convention. Her influence in the national councils of the party is frequently more potential than that of any other state, because in recent years she has invariably sent a solid delegation to the Republican national conventions.

The nomination of Roosevelt for the vice presidency in Philadelphia in 1900 was the result of the action of the late Senator Quay, with Senator Penrose co-operating, in swinging the Pennsylvania delegation into line early for Roosevelt and thus forming an organization which the late Senator Hanna was unable to defeat.

So at Chicago, at the recent Republican convention, Senator Penrose, the new leader of the Republican organization of Pennsylvania, led the way for the nomination of Fairbanks for vice president, the Pennsylvania delegation being the first influential body of delegates to meet in caucus and decide to vote as a unit for the Indiana favorite. This started the stampede to Fairbanks and his unanimous nomination quickly followed.

Vice Presidential Candidate Fairbanks is coming to Pennsylvania to show his appreciation of the support which Senator Penrose and his colleagues in the Pennsylvania delegation gave him at Chicago. Although he is in great demand in doubtful states, Senator Fairbanks has accepted an invitation to speak at the convention of Republican clubs which is to be opened in Reading on September 21, and he will no doubt there reiterate his acknowledgment of the support which Pennsylvania gave him at Chicago and which he personally made to Senator Penrose when he called upon him after the adjournment of the national convention.

The young Republicans of the State League feel highly honored that Senator Fairbanks should come to this state at this time. They have appointed a committee to meet him in Baltimore and escort him to Reading, where he will address a meeting in the Academy of Music on the evening of Wednesday, September 21.

Secretary Andrews, of the Republican state committee, says great preparations are being made by the Republicans of Reading to entertain the visitors on that occasion. A delegation of active spirits on the several committees addressed a meeting of the Allied Republican Clubs in Philadelphia a few nights ago, and they guaranteed an enjoyable time for all of the delegates and those who may accompany them. The convention will open on the morning of September 21. There will be a trip to Mount Penn that afternoon, and in the evening there will be a grand parade of local and visiting Republicans prior to the meeting which will be held in the evening. The convention will hold two sessions the following day.

Pennsylvania, it is seen, wields a power in Republican national conventions, and she is second to no other state in the strength of her Republican delegation on the floor of congress. In Republican congressional caucuses she has more votes than has any other state. Her influence in shaping the action of the Republican members of congress can thus be appreciated.

It is a fitting compliment to the Republican congressional delegation from the Keystone state that the veteran speaker of the house of representatives, "Uncle Joe" Cannon, should tender his services to help maintain the prestige of the Republican delegation from Pennsylvania in congress. Speaker Cannon has accepted an invitation to speak in York in support of the candidacy of Congressman Lefean for re-election in the York-Adams district. This is normally a Democratic district, but Congressman Lefean has carried it at the last two elections. Speaker Cannon, in accepting the invitation to address a meeting in the district of Mr. McLean, wrote: "Next my neighbors in Illinois, my home state, I feel more at home among Pennsylvania Republicans than among any others. They are of the sturdy, true blue, ever loyal and aggressive school of Republicanism that appeals to me. We want Pennsylvania to continue as the banner Republican state in the country, and I will do my best to help her keep her Republican strength in the house of representatives. Pennsylvania's interests are so great; they are so much dependent upon Republican supremacy that every Republican candidate for congress in the old Keystone state should have the backing of the full strength of the Republican organization, local, state and national, to insure victory in November."

PLEASANT REUNION OF THE SCHENCK FAMILY.

About 500 of the Lineage of the First Settlers Assembled Near Howard.

One of those pleasant occasions that occurs too seldom in the lives of most of us took place in the grove near Howard Thursday. It was the annual reunion of the Schenck fraternity, and was attended by about 500 descendants of this historic Revolutionary family. The reunion was a most successful as well as enjoyable one, and the only thing that occured to mar the pleasures of the day was the two showers that passed over this section in the afternoon and caused the participants to seek shelter temporarily in the nearby houses or in the pavilion at the grove.

Judge John G. Love, of Bellefonte, gave a most interesting talk in the afternoon, as also did Rev. Artman, of Howard. Among the amusements was a game of base ball between Howard and Hecla which was called on account of rain with the score 8 to 6, in favor of Howard.

A fine dinner was served, the picnicers forming in groups and family gatherings around tables ladened with tempting viands.

One of the important actions of the association at this reunion was the decision to remove the remains of the seven bodies of the original Pletcher family that have rested for scores of years in the Butler graveyard to the Schenck cemetery and erect a suitable monument. The bodies will be exhumed at once. Among the bodies to be removed are those of Henry Pletcher and wife. Mr. Pletcher was a Revolutionary soldier and for valient service rendered during the struggles of our forefathers was presented by thegovernment at Washington with 400 acres of ground near the present site of Howard. He took up his claim in 1796 and lived and died a hero of these strenuous times, respected and beloved by all. It is meet, even at this late date, that his remains should be properly looked after and a suitable marker placed over his grave for the services rendered his country and his people in the misty pass of years long departed.

IN MEMORY OF SENATOR PATTON.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Republican County committee in memory of Senator Patton.

WHEREAS, God, in his omniscient, but incrutable providence, has suddenly removed from this earth, the Honorable Alexander E. Patton, who, at the time of his death, so ably and honorably represented the 34th Senatorial District, composed of the Counties of Clearfield, Centre and Clinton, in the State Senate of Pennsylvania.

AND WHEREAS, our distinguished Senator stood in the full prime of youngmanhood upon the threshold of a brilliant and glorious political business and financial career, and will be sadly missed not only in the councils of the State, but also in the Republican Party, of which he was a shining representative, and in the principals of which he was so devotedly attached.

Therefore be it Resolved, that the Republican Committee of Centre County here by expresses its grateful appreciation of the sterling integrity, true worth and christian manhood of the Honorable Alexander E. Patton, whose untimely death it deeply mourns.

And be it Further Resolved, that we offer to the family of our deceased Statesman leader our most tender sympathy in the crushing affliction that has bereft them of a loving husband and father, with the sincere trust that God may assist them to bear in humble submission the grievous burden He has laid upon them.

Among the Bellefonter's who attended the funeral of Senator Patton on Saturday were Judge John G. Love, Hon. A. O Furst, E. L. Orvis, H. P. Harris, Philip D. Foster, Col. J. L. Spangler, Thomas A. Shoemaker, Harry Keller Esq. John M. Shugert, Dr. M. J. Locke, Wm. P. Homes, Col. James P. Coburn, William C. Heinle, G. W. Rees, Earle C. Tuten, Ollie Campbell and Wilmer L. Malin.

From Philipsburg there was H. C. Warfel, J. N. Schoonover, John K. Thompson, P. E. Womelsdorf, John Gowland, Chas. G. Avery and others.

Hon. H. R. Curtin, of Roland, President Atherton of State College; A. G. Morris and A. A. Stevens of Tyrone were also there.

A SAD AFFLICTION.

Two Deaths in one Night in Same Home at Milesburg.

About 9 o'clock on Sabbath evening, Sept. 11th, 1904, the life of Mrs. Nancy Swarm, a well known and life long resident of Milesburg came to its close. She was aged 73 years, 5 months, and 3 days, and the cause of her death was the infirmities of old age.

About four hours later, her son Samuel Lewis Swarm was suddenly stricken down by heart trouble, intensified no doubt by grief over his mother's death. He was aged 43 years, 9 months, and 7 days. For years he has been the village barber, and a prominent member and official of the Milesburg Fire Company. He was a good citizen and will be much missed. Both mother and son were highly esteemed and had many frinds as was shown by the abundance of floral tribute and the large concourse that gathered for the funeral obsequies.

The survivors of Mrs. Nancy Swarm are one son and two daughters, John Swarm of Delancey, Mrs. Sarah Choffle, of Delancey; and Mrs Catherine McKinney, of Winburn, also two brothers, Samuel Koon, of Titusville; and Joseph Koon of Boalsburg; and one sister, Mrs. Mary Page of Linden Hall; there are also three half-brothers John Koon of Centre Hall, Andrew Koon of Rock View and Wm. Koon in the west, and one half-sister Mrs. Bessie Watson.

Samuel Swarm is survived by his wife, Mrs. Minnie Swarm and four small children, the oldest of whom is eleven years of age. Their names are Agnes, Earl, Samuel and Elwood.

Funeral services were held at their late residence on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Pastor A. C. Lathrope officiated assisted by Rev. Piper of the M. E. church and Rev. Shultz of the Evangelical church. Business was for the time suspended, the school dismissed and almost the entire community attended. The fire company attended in a body, six of whom acted as pall bearers. First they bore the body, of the son to the hearse and then carried the body of Mrs. Swarm to its last resting place in the Milesburg cemetery, near by. The funeral cortege then proceeded in carriages to Curtin where Samuel Swarm was interred. It was a severe blow to the family and they have the sympathy of the entire community.

PARKER HAS A "HOODOO"

John Markle, Coal Baron, Lines Up Workingmen Against Him.

VENTING SPLEEN ON ROOSEVELT

Men Who Advocate the "Shot Gun" Policy of Settling Labor Disputes Naturally Take Kindly to the Wall Street Candidate.

[Special Correspondence.]

Harrisburg, Sept. 13.

Pennsylvania has furnished Judge Parker, the Democratic nominee for president, with a "hoodoo."

His name is John Markle.

Markle is the Luzerne coal baron, who believes in settling labor disputes with the shotgun. He does not like President Roosevelt because President Roosevelt did not send federal troops into the coal region two years ago, and with them enable Markle and his associates to carry out their schemes of intimidation. The whole country was then shocked by the awful demand that a thousand miners be shot rather than have the mines started up under any but the conditions imposed by the coal barons.

Who does not recall the suffering which the public had to endure through this coal strike? Who does not remember how the price of coal went soaring skyward, how the poor were freezing and the rich, ready to pay any price for coal, were frequently unable to get even a small supply?

President Roosevelt's action, not as a public official, but as a citizen interested in the general welfare, in urging that the issues in the coal strike be submitted to arbitration was generally applauded at the time. The strike was ended and the miners and the operators, with one or two exceptions, cordially agreed to the terms of settlement. Markle dissented, but he was obliged to go along with the others.

Now John Markle is venting his spleen on President Roosevelt.

Although he has been a Republican for many years, he is out for Parker, the Democratic candidate for president. He has only one grievance against President Roosevelt—his action in the coal strike.

John Markle, according to the managers of the Republican campaign in this state, is making more votes for President Roosevelt than any other factor in the canvass in this state.

The Democratic leaders would give anything to have Markle muzzled for the balance of the campaign. They say they have been "hoodooed" ever since the announcement was made that Markle had put on a Parker button.

They want to forget that Markle is on earth. They know that thousands of workingmen throughout Pennsylvania and the entire Union, in fact, would not desire a better opportunity of showing their contempt for this disgruntled coal baron than by voting for President Roosevelt.

Markle's declaration for Parker has had the effect of emphasizing the fact that Parker's nomination for the presidency was brought about by Wall street, with Belmont in command of the corporation forces.

The Bryanites at St. Louis had no idea of what they were up against until they were confronted with the Wall street politicians of the David B. Hill type, and Wall street newspaper influence, which boomed Parker all over the country. Parker was distinctively the corporation candidate at the St. Louis convention. While Bryan and his followers had the cheers of the spectators, the Parker managers, who, with money to burn, had been going over the country setting up delegates in Parker's interest, had the votes on the floor of the convention.

The Parker candidacy naturally appeals to John Markle.

The Parker candidacy has not, however, aroused any enthusiasm among the rank and file of the voters. It has not appealed to the workingmen of the country, and it has not been received with favor even by the masses of the Democracy.

Parker has nothing in common with the average Democrat. He is a corporation-backed candidate, and his candidacy stands for Wall street and corporate domination of the Democratic national organization.

John Markle is for Parker!

That is enough for the great army of workers who will go to the polls on the 8th day of November next.

The calamity howlers have been given a severe setback by recent developments. A temporary stagnation in business is at an end. There is a marked revival of activity in nearly all lines of trade, and manufacturers are starting up their establishments on full time.

The predictions of the Democratic orators of hard times will not be fulfilled.

Right here in Pennsylvania the most gratifying news comes from the Pennsylvania railroad. In the Altoona shops of this great road on the last payday the sum of $428,500 was paid out in wages, which was an increase of $51,500 over the previous month. The men have since been put on full time in the shops, and many men who had been laid off have been re-employed, and it is expected that next months' pay will exceed $600,000. Improvements contemplated all along the line of the road will be pushed to early completion, and every effort will be made to prepare for the increased traffic which will follow the steady improvement in general business conditions which is now in progress.

Special Trains for Camp.

Special trains from Bellefonte and Coburn will be run Wednesday and Thursday of next week for the accommodation of those wishing to attend the Encampment and Exhibition at Grange Park, Centre Hall, as follows:

CORTELYOU IS PLEASED

Congratulates Penrose On Activity of Pennsylvania Republicans.

AIDING NATIONAL COMMITTEE

State Committee Is Co-Operating With the Members of the National Committee In the Campaign For Roosevelt and Fairbanks.

[Special Correspondence.]

Philadelphia, Sept. 6.

A fitting compliment was paid to the Republican organization of Pennsylvania last week by Chairman Cortelyou, of the Republican national committee. It was upon the occasion of Senator Penrose's visit to the national committee headquarters in New York, when the subject of state organizations was under consideration.

"Pennsylvania Republicans have the finest, most compact and most loyal Republican organization in the country," said Chairman Cortelyou, "and I fervently wish that other states would copy the methods and manifest the enthusiasm and the ardor which is being shown by the Republicans of the Keystone state in the present campaign."

Senator Penrose visited the national chairman upon a special invitation from Mr. Cortelyou, who desired to talk over a number of matters of importance in connection with the presidential campaign. Their interview was a most cordial and satisfactory one, and Chairman Cortelyou was assured that he could always count upon Pennsylvania for men and money, as occasion demanded.

As chairman of the Republican state committee, Senator Penrose has organized a corps of spellbinders, whose services have been placed at the call of Chairman Cortelyou for duty in the doubtful states, and he has already done considerable effective work in aiding the members of the advisory committees named by the national chairman to collect campaign subscriptions for the presidential contest. Pennsylvania is second only to New York in the amount of money contributed to Republican campaigns, and with the co-operation of State Chairman Penrose the representatives of the national committee who are soliciting contributions in this state will, it is believed, be able to make gratifying reports.

Information received at the state headquarters daily indicates a general disposition among Republicans to help make good Senator Penrose's prediction that Pennsylvania will even surpass the record-breaking majority of 301,000 for McKinley by giving Roosevelt at least 325,000 majority. It was this statement to Chairman Cortelyou that brought forth his very complimentary reference to the Republican organization of Pennsylvania.

No one not thoroughly familiar with conditions in this state can appreciate the ramifications and the sturdy character of the Republican organization of Pennsylvania. As it stands today it has stood for 50 years, ever loyal to the principles of Republicanism and ever steadfast to the Republican nominees.

This organization was not built in a day. It is the result of the careful watchful interest of men of intelligence and activity; men who have labored hard to cement the various interests in the several counties and who have welded together into a compact body the brains and the brawn of stalwart Republicanism of every section of the commonwealth.

The organization of Pennsylvania today represents hundreds of thousands of Republican voters who are in touch with the precinct committees and through them the county organizations and the state committee. These voters are all enrolled, and their names and addresses are kept permanently at the headquarters of the state committee in this city. The lists are carefully arranged, and are always available for communications to be sent directly by the chairman of the state committee on a minute's notice.

In most of the states of the Union party organizations are formed for each campaign, and most of the preliminary work before each election consists of gathering together an organization for election day. The Pennsylvania idea is to keep a permanent organization. The secretary of the state committee, Colonel Wesley R. Andrews, who has been engaged on this work for many years, is almost as busy between campaigns perfecting his lists as he is in the midst of a desperately fought political contest. Senator Penrose, who succeeds the late Senator Matthew Stanley Quay as leader of the Republican organization of Pennsylvania, was a trusted lieutenant of the great leader who recently passed away, and he has endeavored to follow his example in keeping the party organization constantly on a "fighting basis." Senator Penrose has gone further. He has sought to harmonize the party wherever differences have existed, and he has made it a rule to consult the active Republicans of every district before acting upon any proposition affecting that district. He believes that the men who labor year in and year out in the interest of the party are the men to be consulted.

SEPTEMBER WEATHER.

Hicks as Usual Predicts Many Storms for the Month.

Rev. Hicks, the St. Louis weather prophet, makes the following predictions for this month.

From about September 5th to 17th, to an annual period in which the earth passes a maximum of electrical disturbances. As early as the 7th look for growing warmth and falling barometer and other dreaded indications of approaching storms. About the 7th to the 10th wide reaching and severe storms of rain, thunder and wind will travel over most of the country. This is a time when dangerous equinoctial gales and hurricanes are more than probable in all the gulf and South Atlantic coast regions. Very warm weather will precede and attend these storms, and tornadic development may be expected over very many inland sections. At the winding up of these disturbances, a rushing high barometer and cold, northwesterly gales will come out of the northwest attended with frost in northerly sections. In every probability some of the most general and violent storms of the month will transpire within forty-eight hours of noon on the 24th. This is a time when danger from high tides and equinoctial hurricanes should be apprehended along all seas and coasts most exposed to such visitations. The last stages of these disturbances from the northwest will bring touches of early snow with high barometer, cold winds and frosty nights.

September will come to its close growing decidedly warmer, the barometer will be falling in the western states, with areas of cloudiness and rain gathering and moving eastward. By the 30th well defined storms will be noted in the west, which will advance eastward over the country during the 1st and 2nd days of October.

An Animal Story For Little Folks

An Up to Date Heron

"I'm gettin' rather old," croaked the heron; "that's why I can't catch 'em. My sight is failin' me, and I'm not so quick on the strike as I used to be. Them pesky fish gits away from me every time, and I'm jes' naturally starvin' to death."

"You're right there, old man," said the Yellow Ned as he slipped out of the way of his once terrible beak. "You'll never catch us again. Go off to the woods and die."

Mr. Heron put his head on one side and then on the other. He was thinking. Over across the river a man was fishing.

"I'll see how he does it," said he. "Oh, a line, and a worm at one end and a pole on the other—easy! But, let me see, I have no pole; no, but I have a scheme."

Next day he sat himself on the bank with a long string tied to his long beak and a wiggly worm tied at one end of the string. He dropped the end of the string in the water. The worm wiggled. Mr. Heron winked one eye and then the other. Pretty soon his head bobbed. "Ah," he cried, "a bite!"

Up went his long neck and up came Mr. Yellow Ned, kicking and struggling at the end of the line. The old heron took him off the hook and hung him on a stick. "Waal," remarked the old bird, as he put on another worm, "I reckon it don't make no difference how yer git yer fish so long as yer git him."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

He Had a Daughter.

"You have a daughter, have you not, sir?" said a minister to an old gentleman with whom he had formed a casual acquaintance as a fellow passenger.

The old gentleman essayed to answer, but the question had strangely affected him.

"I beg your pardon," said the minister, "if I have thoughtlessly awakened in your mind recollections of a painful nature. The world is full of sorrow, sir, and perhaps my question recalls to your memory a fair, beautiful girl whose blossoming young life had withered in its bloom. Am I right, sir?"

"No, not exactly," replied the old gentleman sadly. "I have five unmarried darters, mister, an' the youngest of the lot is twenty-eight years old."

The Teacher's Fault.

Teacher—Why, Freddy, how did you get those black and blue welts on your arm?

Scholar—Them's your fault, teacher.

Teacher—My fault? What do you mean?

Scholar (sobbing reminiscently)—Why, you told me it was a poor rule that didn't work both ways. So when I went home I took pa's new two foot rule that doubles up on a hinge and bent it back till it worked both ways and then pa said I'd broken the joints, and he went and got his razor strop.

Some Chinese Baths.

A traveler in Mongolia writes: "There are some hot springs by the road about twenty miles north of Chingpeng. The place is named Tangshan. The arrangements for those anxious to benefit by their healing properties are very primitive. A row of twenty or thirty wooden boxes the size of an ordinary packing case are ranged beside the road. In these sit bathers of every age and both sexes, with their heads protruding. Attendants with buckets continuously refill the boxes from the springs. For less luxurious bathers there is accommodation in a pool which has been dug out close by. In this they squat, scooping up the water and pouring it over their heads with brass basins. It is curious to reflect that establishments like Homburg and Aix-les-Bains have had their origin in such beginnings."

Why Not?

"If you refuse me I shall never love another woman."

"Does that promise stand good if I accept you?"

CHEERFUL WOMEN.

How to Keep Happy.

DESPONDENCY is a thing of evil origin and evil results. Worry produces nothing but wrinkles and wretchedness. Let the reader put up a little note on her bureau, on her desk, and at the head of her bed, just two words, DON'T WORRY. Worry is the greatest foe to the happiness of any household. An anxious, despondent face, a fretful, complaining voice, will make every one uncomfortable.

A woman's nerves are more truly the cause of worry than outside troubles. The nerves are to a woman's body the telegraph system, which surely warns her of any trouble in the feminine make-up.

WHY WOMEN HAVE 'NERVES.'

"That is the reason why women have 'nerves.' When our thoughts begin to grow cloudy and uncertain, our impulses lag and the warnings of pain and distress are sent like flying messages throughout our limbs and frame, we straightway, nine times in ten, lay the cause of the trouble to some defect in the point where we first feel it. Is it a headache, a backache, a sensation of irritability or twitching and uncontrollable nervousness, something must be wrong with the head or back, a woman naturally says, but all the time the real trouble very often centers in the womanly organs. In nine cases out of ten the seat of the difficulty is here, and a woman should take rational treatment for its cure. The local disorder and inflammation of the delicate special organs of the sex should be treated steadily and systematically."

Dr. Pierce, during a long period of practice, found that a prescription made up entirely of roots and herbs, without the use of alcohol, cured over ninety per cent. of such cases. After using this remedy for many years in his private practice he put it up in a form that would make it easily procurable, and it can be had at any store where medicines are handled.

$500 REWARD FOR WOMEN WHO CANNOT BE CURED.

Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and uniform cures, a record such as no other remedy for the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women ever attained, the proprietors and makers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States, for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

They have the most remarkable record of cures made by this world-famed remedy ever placed to the credit of any preparation especially designed for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments.

Sick women, especially those suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"I write these few lines to let you know that I am using your 'Favorite Prescription,' and the good it has done me," says Mrs. Timothy Bourgeois, of Tobique Narrows, New Bruns. "I was troubled with headache and stomach trouble, also other female weakness. Having read a great deal about your cures I concluded to try the medicine, so my husband purchased a bottle of 'Favorite Prescription.' I was no time taking it before I felt better. Cannot thank you enough for the good it has done me. I hope others may be benefited by its use as I have been."

"I can strongly recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines, especially the 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' writes Mrs. Clara Gardner, of Rainey, Mo. "I suffered from nervous debility, brought on by hard work and trouble. Had suffered several years; was growing weaker gradually, not only in body but in mind also. I began taking your medicine last spring. Commenced to improve from the start, and by the time I had taken twelve bottles, six of the 'Favorite Prescription' and six of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' felt that I was well enough to get along without medicine. Was like a different woman and would not have been in the condition I was before taking the medicines, for a hundred dollars. Am well and hearty now, and if I ever need medicine again, will certainly take Dr. Pierce's."

KNOW THYSELF.

Your most important knowledge is knowledge of yourself. You should read a complete "Doctor" book, called Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. Has reached its sixty-first edition or 2,000,000 copies. Send 21 cents in one-cent stamps, for this 1000-page book in paper covers, or 31 cents for a copy in cloth binding. Address Dr. R. V. "FLASH WALTER"

"You have had," said I, thoughtfully, "a long and varied experience. Now, what is this honor among thieves which is referred to so frequently in the book of social proverbs?"

"Pidie," replied Mr. Tutt. 'It exists in the imagination of story writers only. The lawyer, the parson, and the doctor, don't they all take their bit out of their friends if they get a chance? What do you think was the worst job I ever did?"

"Couldn't say," said I.

"Why, robbed a chap what had robbed three of his pals. I used to chuckle a bit to think how I fetched that off and cuss when I remembered all I got out of it."

"Let me share the chuckle with you," said I. "I am still unregenerate, you know, and besides, since it confounded the wicked and spoiled the thievish, it is a moral story, and may serve to help the morally weak and faltering."

"It might serve to get me shot or knocked on the head and dropped into the river," quoth my shady companion.

Mr. Tutt refilled his pipe and glass and proceeded to enlighten me concerning the manner in which, at a pinch, dog will not disdain to eat dog, thief to rob thieves.

"I was down on my luck at the time," said my protege. "I had had nothing to eat since morning, and nothing to drink—which was worse all that week, and altogether I was in a vile mood—at war with myself and the world at large. I had left London to—er—look for work, and I was penniless, and, being neither able to beg, borrow, nor steal, I tramped and starved, and fetched up for the night under a straw-stack. There I sat while the shadows deepened around, and then, growing tired of cussing my luck, always an unsatisfactory pursuit, I scooped myself a shelter well into the heart of the stack, and lay down.

"I had been there about an hour, I should reckon, when I heard a trap being driven slowly along the road towards me. It stopped right opposite, and a chap tied up snug in a big ulster clambered down.

"'I'll cut across here, Wal,' I heard him say, 'and get a bed at the Bull. Pick me up there the day after tomorrow, and if all goes well we'll shift it that night and get it down the river. Bob has got the smack, and will be round by dark.'

"I didn't hear what the man in the cart said; but just then he struck a match and I got a fine view of him. I was sure I had seen him before, but I was wondering who he could be the man on foot jumped across a gate just behind me, and the cart drove on.

"It was a mile or two outside Rumford where I had staved, and I turned off before getting to the town and struck off towards the river. I must have looked a pretty fair sample of a tramp; but I wasn't so much concerned about my looks as my appetite just then, and I was doing a bit of thinking towards a likely plan for getting a breakfast when a trap came bowling along behind me, and very nearly put me beyond the need of troubling about that sort of thing ever after.

"It was my luck done-up saucy in a spanking little turnout, only I didn't recognize it at first. In fact I could only see a criminal selfishness on the part of the driver in muffling himself up in rugs and waterproofs, and leaning chance footgoers to look after themselves, and I expressed my views pretty freely as I dodged the wheels.

"The man in the trap reined up and looked hard at me, and when I had exhausted my store of forcible English he remarked—'You are early astir, my friend. Your bed wasn't to your liking, probably? However, I mustn't stand here any longer or my nag will be taking cold. You seem down on your luck, and if you care to do a bit of work for me I can probably set you up again. You look miserable enough to require the job, and I should hope you are discreet enough to do it with no further interest than concerns the payment. In short, I want a man to help me with a risky operation, to hold his tongue about it, and to go his way and leave me to go mine when it is finished. It is a bargain?"

"'Sealed and signed,' said I. 'I'm on like a cat to a cook.'"

"I got into the trap and accepted a supply of the wrappings, and in silence we continued the journey. We turned off to the right soon after, and drew up at a little roadside pub. The other chap got down, and motioned me to follow him, we left the trap to the care of the stableman and entered the house, where a meal was set for us in a private room.

"He was a tall, thin, muscular-looking chap, and no stranger. It was the very man I had seen in the trap, and now I could get a square view of him, I placed him at once. It was 'Flash Walter,' the king of thieves, a chap who only handled first-class jobs, and who did that mostly at second-hand, planning them out and getting them out and allowing others to do the risky part of the work for the smaller part of the profits.

"Fortunately he didn't know me. I always worked single-handed, and I had brains enough to find my own 'crib' and keep the contents to myself when I had cracked it. I didn't let on, but pretended to be the tramp down on his luck he had evidently taken me for. I couldn't help chuckling to myself, though, and I almost laughed out in his face when he got what he thought was a likely and satisfactory lie and spun it out for me.

"He was a bit vague, but I gathered that he wanted me to believe that he had got a bit of smuggled stuff hidden down by the river which he wanted me to remove. He made it 'smuggled' so as to account for the secrecy and the need of working at night, or I reckon he'd have been a merchant prince or a farmer or any other darn thing that came handy.

"'So,' said he, after explaining as much as he though necessary—which wasn't much—'if you care for the job say so, and you shall not be badly paid for your share of the work. If not, it is not too late to back out.'

"'Not me,' said I. 'The job's good enough for me, and I'm your man when you're ready.'

"'That's the style,' said he, heartily. 'We'll drive on to Tilbury now and pick you up something decent to wear.'

"We had been driving close on two hours along the desolate and deserted road, when the horse suddenly drew up of his own accord before a wretched-looking little four-roomed cottage standing back from the wayside. Jumping down with alacrity, the driver undid a gate and led the way to the back of the ken. Then, motioning me to alight, he stabled the horse for the time being under a lean-to shed, and possessing himself of some tools and a lantern, he walked briskly across the plot of ground which evidently belonged to the house, climbed through a hedge at the bottom, and pursued the even tenor of his way across a dreary waste of marshland, his tall figure bobbing up and down over the ridges and rills, with me a bad second stumbling heavily after him.

"Presently the steady lap, lap, lap, of the incoming tide could be heard in front of us, and then he drew up and waited for me to join him.

"'There it is,' he said, pointing to what seemed to be a dense black cloud rising in front of us through the white mist. There is about three feet of water up her sides by this time, and we shall have to wade it. Keep behind me, and not a sound until we are on board and below. Mind how you come.'

"It wasn't any picnic wading through that water over a slippery bottom, and I was glad enough when I found myself on the slanting deck, and diving down into an an inky cavern that yawned before us.

"Once safely down and away from observation, my companion lit the lantern, and threw the cheering beams around the contracted and poky little cabin, where under a heap of old rubbish we found the 'smuggled' goods. Five heavy rough-wood cases there were, and these with infinite toil and trouble we got to shore, and then across those tedious marshes to the trap, each case requiring a separate journey, for it was as much as we could do to lift one between us.

"'A tough night's work that, my friend,' said my companion, 'and finished none too soon. However, we have done it, and done it well, too, I flatter myself. I will put you on your road, and then—the best of friends must part, you know.'

"'Yes,' said I shyly. 'Smuggled goods weigh heavy. It ain't ostrich feathers, is it?'

"'Never mind that,' said he shortly 'Here is payment for your trouble, and there are a couple of sovereigns to take you back to London, or wherever you may wish to go, and now you take my tip and forget everything.'

"I touched my hat and took the tip—as far as the coin was concerned it wasn't bad payment either—£ 20 in notes and two in coin—for a stiff night's work—but I thought there ought to be more than that in it for Mr. William Tutt, if that much was enough for a mere tramp.

"I didn't go back to London, I went a hundred yards along the road instead, jumped the hedge and stole back and hid myself where I could get a clear view of cottage.

"I had plenty of time to do all the thinking I required, and, although, of course, I was very well able to put two together. I knew 'Flash Walter's reputation, and I had a shrewd idea concerning the nature of that smuggled cargo. The arrangement I heard made was for a smack to come down and pick up the stuff on the night following. Quite so; only when the smack and the other parties arrived 'Flash Walter' and the stuff would be missing. Well, they would, but not in company if I could help it.

"I crept up to the cottage, and took a cautious peep through the window. My late employer was building a fire in the tumble-down grate, and I gathered from that and other signs that he wouldn't be likely to turn out yet a while.

Quite likely he would lie low all day, load up at dusk, cart the stuff back to London, and have it all disposed of and himself out of the way by the time the others were ready to start work.

"At first I thought of sealing him up in his cage; but it was such a rickety, ramshackle old show that an energetic man could not be kept prisoner there for more than half an hour. With a kitchen poker, a mere boy could have battered his way out. So, abandoning that idea, I set to work to remove the cases; but here again I was done; I couldn't drag, let alone lift them, and the noise I should have to make would inevitably bring my late companion on the scene.

"When in doubt, play trumps! There was a chap living close handy who owed me a good turn. He pretended to be a second-hand clothesdealer, and he was with intervals for the practice of another profession. I went up and had the luck to find him at home, and ready for a flyer to lend me a hand. He had a stiff little cob and a cart which he used in his business, and we paid another visit to that cottage—I in the guise of a policeman—within a couple of hours.

"Fortunately our victim's pistol was not fully charged. I missed the only bullet it contained by a finger's width, and Job lost a couple of teeth in stopping the revolver itself, and then we got our quarry down, and tussed him up like a fowl.

"My word, how he did swear. Job is pretty tough, but he fairly shuddered, and I had to tell our prisoner to shut up and save his prayers for the magistrates in the morning.

"We loaded up the cases into Job's cart, and then we harnessed the other conveyance, and loaded that up with its rightful owner. I told Job to drive ten miles out to anywhere, and get rid of his passenger by dropping him into the nearest ditch, bring the pony and trap back to the cottage, and leave it there. I was to go back to the shop in Purfleet with the stuff and wait for him."

"Well" said I, as Mr. Tutt paused as though he had a sudden reluctance to continue his interesting narrative of scoundrelism.

"Well, I didn't exactly go back to the shop," he resumed with a grimace that may have had a moral origin. "It was a very soft, bright, pleasant sort of morning, and I got thinking about things in general and nothing much in particular, and forgot all about where I was driving, and when I came to remember myself I was miles off from Purfleet, and getting in towards Barking."

"That was very singular," said I gravely.

"It was a bit odd," agreed Mr. Tutt, with a cheerful impudence. "And what made it all the more queer was that I knew a chap who kept a pub down there. If it had been anywhere close now, I should have been fairly up a tree, for, what with the distance and the weight, the horse was getting about played out, and it wouldn't have been possible to drive him back.

"As it was, of course, it was easy and natural. I just drove round to the back, called out the landlord and engared a room, and had the boxes taken up to it. Then I had something to eat, while the nag was feeding, and drove quietly back to Job.

"He had done his part well enough; but he was a bit short, because I had changed my plans, and he stood out for a share of the boxes. If I didn't agree, he said, he should hunt up 'Flash Walter' and blow on me. He knew of the whole game from one of the chaps who was coming down on the smack, being a pal of his, and this alteration would interest a lot of men. In his temper he let it all out to me, and told me a good deal more than I knew about it myself.

"It turned out that 'Flash Walter's' gang had had a run of luck with two big places out at Epping, and had lodged the stuff with a 'fence' at Whitechapel. Now there was a half a dozen of these in it, not including the 'fence,' and 'Flash Walter' thought there were too many altogether to share up with. So he and big Brown, the man I had seen him with that night on the road, and another had got the stuff away by breaking in and robbing the 'fence,' who was holding it. They had got on board, lighted somehow and run it down the river on to the mud, where I had helped to move from.

"But three even was too many for 'Flash Walter,' and while the other poor chaps were carrying out the plan they had made about it, the crafty villain picked up a perfect stranger for a couple of tenners to help him get the whole lot for himself. It was a pretty tidy haul too, most of it being silver plate, with a few odds and ends of stones and jewelry. Job said they reckoned it was worth five thousand to them, and that meant twenty at least in the open market."

"Phew," I whistled. "That was a pretty fair lift for you. I wonder you didn't do something useful with it, and get out of a calling, which you know, is really not quite respectable."

"As for that," said Tutt, rising and shaking the ashes out of his pipe, "I had that very purpose in view, and I sprung another fiver, and promised Job a fair division jos: to try and get away from him, and go back and see about it. But Job was artful, and after fooling about his place for a day and a half, for he wouldn't leave me a minute by myself, he was that fond of me all of a sudden, I offered him a fifth share (one case) for himself.

"He grumbled a bit, but he took the offer when he saw I meant it to be that or nothing, and we drove over to Barking and got the cases.

"Coming back we were stopped on the road by a bluebottle. I don't think he meant anything special, but they were always suspicious of Job, and instead of bluffing, the silly fool tried to drive off. Of course that did the trick. The policeman got a pal to his assistance, and after inviting Job to open any of the boxes and show that they did, as he stated, contain old clothes, which of course we couldn't do, they ran the whole outfit up to the station.

"There the cases were broken open one after the other, and they all contained the same,"

"That was awkward," said I; "and what did you get?"

"A bit of relief at the moment, and the spike for months after," growled Tutt. "The case contained bricks—just common yellow bricks—and I had spent hours and worked like a navvy, and given Job a clear ten quid just to get a few hundred bricks that a jobbing bricklayer wouldn't have troubled to sneak. Oh, it was maddening. Honor among thieves, eh! Not much, there ain't."—Pittsburg Leader.

CONCERTS BY MASSED BANDS.

Never were musical events in America planned upon such an elaborate scale as those of the World's Fair. A series of concerts will be given by competing bands in contest for prizes offered by the World's Fair. These contests will take place in Festival Hall, Sept. 12 to 17.

Nine cash prizes, aggregating $30,000, are offered for the successful bands. The prizes are divided so as to give to the organization scoring the highest number of points $3,250; $2,500 will be given to the band scoring the second highest number of points and $1,500 to the one getting the third highest number.

The above division is made for bands in Class A, which consist of twenty members. In the B class $10,000 will be given in prizes—first, $4,500; second, $3,500; third, $2,000.

Class C, which includes bands of thirty-five members, will enjoy the division of $12,750. For the organization scoring the highest number of points a prize of $6,000 has been named. The second prize is $4,000 and the third $2,700.

Bands employed by the Exposition are not permitted to contest. All players must be bona fide members, and each musician must have been enrolled at least three months prior to the date of the contest. Each band must send to the bureau the name of its members and a nominal entrance fee.

Festival Hall concerts by massed bands will be given at 7:30 each day during the contest, in which all contesting bands will take part under the direction of a distinguished conductor. All bands entering must agree to play one concert in addition to the competing concert and massed concerts.

A separate programme has been prepared by the Bureau of Music for each class, and each band will play through the full programme of its class. The numbers in all three programmes are by eminent composers and are chosen with the view of bringing out the qualities of the bands performing them. The list of composers includes Wagner, Gounod, Offenbach, Verdi, Saint-Saens, Bizet, Strauss and Leoncavallo.

SOFT CORE

Like the running brook, the red blood that flows through the veins has to come from somewhere.

The springs of red blood are found in the soft core of the bones called the marrow and some say red blood also comes from the spleen. Healthy bone marrow and healthy spleen are full of fat.

Scott's Emulsion makes new blood by feeding the bone marrow and the spleen with the richest of all fats, the pure cod liver oil.

For pale school girls and invalids and for all whose blood is thin and pale, Scott's Emulsion is a pleasant and rich blood food. It not only feeds the blood-making organs but gives them strength to do their proper work.

Puts Flesh on Thin People

Vin-te-na builds tissue and muscle, fills out the hollow places, makes graceful curves instead of sharp angles, adds flesh to thin, bony figures, and strengthens as it builds. It improves the appetite, increases the assimilation of food, removes all impurities from the blood, and produces a quick restoration to general health, in fact a lastting cure.

Vin-te-na is not a "symptom remedy." It goes directly to the source of all weakness, and positively removes the cause. It acts quickly because it goes directly into the circulation, cleansing, strengthening and enriching the blood with the precise elements which the tired and weakened nervous system requires.

DOINGS IN SOCIETY.

Dances, Parties and Straw Rides Given in Honor of Visiting Guests.

Bellefonte is the prettiest summer resort in Pennsylvania, and every season great crowds of people come here to pass away the warm months and enjoy the cool healthy mountain air. This summer seems to have capped the climax for visitors who have all enjoyed themselves and no doubt will come often in the future.

On Tuesday evening Miss Daisy Potter gave a "Hurdy-Gurdy" dance at her parents beautiful home on Linn street, in honor of the following people who are visiting in Bellefonte: Miss Elizabeth Stiveman, of Lancaster, who is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Murray Andrews, Miss Elizabeth North, of Washginton, D. C., who is at the Crider home on Linn street, Miss Helen Mosser, of Curwensville, who is a guest at Supt. and Mrs. F. H. Thomas on Linn street, Richard Lane, of Philadelphia, and James Parry, a student at State College. Miss Potter's dance was the most successful given this season.

Miss Elizabeth Gephart entertained her many friends on Wednesday evening at her parents home on Linn St.

Miss Mary Weaver gave a straw ride to the Old Fort Thursday evening in honor of the guests from a distance and her friends in Bellefonte. She had as her guests who arrived in Bellefonte Wednesday evening the Misses Ester and Elizabeth Godcharles, of Milton.

Stole a Weighing Machine.

Sometime between Saturday night and Sunday morning some miscreants stole the penny-in-the-slot weighing machine which stood just outside the ladies waiting room at the Pennsylvania station. They carried it up near the old pump house, this side of Lingle's foundry, and there smashed it to pieces and robbed it of its contents. Sunday morning it was found in an old abandoned well near the pump house. It probably contained about $22 as Station Agent Hutchinson says it had not been opened for about three months and that is the amount usually taken out of it every quarter.

The police are investigating the matter but no arrests have as yet been made.

Col. Wilbur F. Reeder's Will.

The will of the late Col. Wilbur F. Reeder has been probated in the office of the clerk of the Orphan's court. It is a very brief document, occupying not more than one-half a sheet of legal-cap paper. It is dated July 4th, 1894, witnessed by Miss Jennie Fauble and Calvin Pifer, and leaves everything to the deceased's wife, Mrs. Lillie G. Reeder, and appoints her the sole executrix of the estate. Aside from the home on North Allegheny street and the interest in a very large law practice the estate consists mainly of life insurance, of which Col. Reeder carried fifty thousand seven hundred dollars.

A Suspicious Death.

Ever since the mysterious death and finding of the body of Ellis Etters, on the banks of the north branch, near Cataract, several weeks ago, the brothers of the dead man and the local authorities of that section have been quietly investigating and they have discovered what they think sufficient evidence to justify them in the belief that Ellis Etters was murdered and not killed by a passing train. The spot where the body was found on the railroad is fully one hundred feet from the bank of the river, and at the time a trail of blood was found from the water's edge to the spot where the body of Etters was found. Another bit of evidence is that his pockets had been turned inside out and his knife, handkerchief, matchsafe, pipe and tobacco all lay on a pile ten feet from the body. And now, it is alleged, a neighbor woman avers that she heard a scream and a noise just about the time that Etters was supposed to have gone to the the river to cross to his home. Another bit of evidence is that from the time that Etters left the Cataract hotel until the body was found in the morning seven coal trains had passed over the railroad, and yet the body was found on the track with only two or three gashes on the head. Under these conditions the case is one that should be most thoroughly investigated by the proper authorities.

Careless Blasting.

Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock the men who are employed by the boro cutting away the ledge of rock just below the Bush Arcade on Water street put off an unusually heavy blast and as a result this end of town received a bombarding they will not soon forget. Stones flew in every direction and nine windows were smashed in the Watchman building and one in the Bush House. Several of the Watchman employes narrowly escaped being struck by the stones and Mr. Crissman at the Bellefonte Central office had just stepped away from a window when a stone crashed through. A stone weighing 3lb, 11ozs was picked up just in front of Green's drug store.

The men employed at this work should be more careful in the future.

DEATH OF JOSEPH GENGHER.

Passed into the Great Beyond on Sunday Afternoon.

"In the midst of life we are in death" and so God's word is fulfilled in the death of this young man

On Sunday at 12:40 p m. the angel of death entered the home of Mrs. Arvilla Gengher on Willowbank street and called away her oldest son Joseph Gengher who has been suffering the last five months from a complication of diseases.

Joseph Gengher was an exemplary young man. When just a little boy his father died and as he was the eldest of the family he felt it his duty to help his mother raise the family, and started to learn the moulding trade at Lingle's foundry, which he finished and was considered one of the best in his profession. By his earnest and efficient ability, he won the highest compliments from his employer. By his kind and manly disposition he won the friendship of hosts of young men in Bellefonte. He was highly respected by all who knew him and to know him was to love him

He was a great home boy. He loved his mother dearly and his entire earnings were given her to maintain the home, and when his work was over in the evenings he always found more pleasure with her, than in other company.

Last April he was taken suddenly ill with hemorrhages, but had nearly recovered his health and had begun his work again, when on Saturday night of Sept. 3rd he was taken ill and from that time he grew gradually worse until his sufferings were peacefully ended on Sunday.

During his last illness he spoke of going "home," but he did not want to leave his mother, but told her "he was fully trusting in the Master."

What a wonderful comfort that should be to the mother, brothers and sisters.

Joseph Allen Gengher was the oldest son of William H., (now deceased) and Arvilla Gengher He was born at Roland, Pa., on January 21st, 1881, and at the time of his death he was aged 23 years 8 months and 10 days.

He was a member of the United Brethren church of Bellefonte; a charter member of the Improved Order of Red Men, Nahasene Tribe, No. 71 which was organized Sept. 19, 1902, and held the position of Collector of Wampum. Mr. Gengher was the first member to have died since the organization He was a member of the Red Men's Fraternal Accident Association of America. He was also a member of the Roosevelt Republican Club which organization attended the funeral in a body.

He leaves to mourn his death a good mother and the following sisters and brothers: Mrs. Henry Gault, of Bellefonte; Mrs. George Martin, of Sowickley; Harvey, of Altoona; Edward, of Sewickley; Blanche and Mable, at home, and a host of friends.

Sad and impressive were the services held Tuesday afternoon over all that was mortal of Joseph A. Gengher. They were conducted by the Rev. A. A. Davidson of the United Brethren church, who spoke beautifully of the life and character of the deceased, how greatly he would be missed in the home, lodge and club. He spoke of when only a short time before he passed away, of the faith he had in the Master, and when the call came he was waiting and ready to go.

The home was crowded with loving friends who gathered to pay a last tribute of respect. "Rock of Ages," and "Jesus Saviour Pilot Me," was sung by the choir and six of Mr. Ginghers intimate gentlemen friends.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful and showed the great love and respect he had among his friends.

Below we give a list of some of the flowers sent, Clock of Asters, I. O. R. M. 71, Bed of Roses, Employes of Lingles Foundry, Sheaf of wheat and Spray of Roses, Republican Club, Sheaf of wheat associates at Bellwood, Two wreathes of Asters, Miss Cain, Mrs. Toner, Spray of Roses, Miss Mary Hendershot, Wreath of Asters, Messrs Stover and Snyder, Spray of Asters, James A. Summers, Spray of Sweet Peas, Mrs. Harry Yeager, Spray of White China Asters and Roses, R. T. Bayard, Spray of Asters, Mrs. Harman, Beautiful wreath from Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Guiswhite, Spray of white Asters, Miss Edna Thomas.

A great many other beautiful bouquets were sent, and the parlor where the body rested was a perfect mound of flowers.

After the services at the home the body was taken to Roland for burial, and great numbers followed the remains to the grave although the place of interment was six miles away.

At the grave the Red Men had charge of the services and as this was the first death since their organization it caused some little comment as to their burial services, which are beautiful. As the Prophet was saying "Fly away Oh thou Great Spirit," a pretty white dove was liberated and ascended high into the heavens. Fully fifty members of this organization attended the funeral in a body. The casket bearers were, Frank Sauerman, Harry Miller, Wm. Rider, Dave Strunk, Frank Dawson and Harry Smith.

The honorary pall bearers were Messrs Clarence Rine, Roger T. Bayard, James Fleming, James Noonan, Jno. Morrison and Warren Wood.

GOLDEN ROD DANCE.

Great Number of Guests From a Destance in Attendance.

Grand and beautiful beyond description was the annual Golden Rod dance given by the top crust of the 400 in Bellefonte on Friday evening.

The large armory never looked prettier than it did on this occasion, and the committee deserve unbounded credit for the artistic and beautiful way in which they had the dance hall decorated.

Over the ceiling from one corner to the other and from side to side long ropes of spruce and laurel leaves were hung, the front of the stage was a mass of small maple trees, in each corner of the room were large jardaniers filled with golden rod and on the large panels at the side of the stage were the words made of golden rod, "Golden Rod Dance."

The music furnished by Kettering's Orchestra of Greensburg was the finest ever heard in Bellefonte, and no doubt they will receive many calls in the future from our young people.

The refreshments were served by the young ladies and gentlemen who had the dance in charge and everything was got up in Queens style.

Never before in the history of dances given by the young ladies and gentlemen of our town have as many guests been present from a distance. Below we give a partial list, Mesdames Salmon, of Lock Haven, Robert H. Fay of Altoona, Misses Boggs, Watson, Gibson, Ball, Mann, Hipple, Bessie and Anna Bickford, Briggens, Messrs, Lynch, Hayes, Kister, Fishburne, Hipple, Austin Candor, John Clapp, Samuel Fredricks Christ Troxel and Calvin Armstrong of Lock Haven, Misses Elizabeth Gibson of Williamsport, Lauder of Dubois, Bess North, Washington, D. THE BELLEFONTE ACADEMY.

To Open their School in the Brockerhoff Building on Bishop Street.

The Bellefonte Academy will positively open its fall term on Tuesday, Sept. 20, in the Brockerhoff building on Bishop Street. The school rooms for the Academic and Intermediate grades will be on the first floor, while accommodations for the boarding department will be provided on the second and third floors of the same building and also in the residence at the Academy. Mr. Hughes is to be congratulated upon securing such suitable emergency quarters. These rooms will be occupied until the repairs at the Academy are completed.

Miss Overton and her assistants will conduct the primary work on the third floor of the Academy residence. Miss Lyon will give all instructions in music for the present in her town studio in the home of the Misses Benner.

We are pleased to announce very bright prospects for the Academy.
